PREFACE.

THE present Manual has arisen from accidental circumstances. At the sale of the late Mr. Bernal's extraordinary collection, the numerous and expensive woodcuts which embellished the Auction Catalogue, became mine for a mere trifle. Upon this it occurred to me, that an illustrated volume, comprising the entire Catalogue, with the prices, and the purchasers' or rather present possessors' names, and such incidental remarks and additions as might suggest themselves, would be an acceptable service to amateurs and collectors;—and those whom I consulted thought the same. I therefore took immediate measures for accomplishing this object, but other and more pressing avocations so continuously engrossed most of my disposable time, that its completion has been sadly retarded.

In the interim I had been invited by the Rev. Harry Dupuis of Richmond, in common with many of the neighbouring gentry, to take part in a projected Exhibition of works of Art and Science, connected with a series of education lectures,—a movement in the path of social progress so consonant to my own views and feelings, that I joined in it most cordially. The Exhibition, which was held in a very large and lofty school-room, presented a rich assortment of objects of vertu and natural history, and reflected great credit upon the taste, industry, and perseverance of the several gentlemen who collected and gratuitously conducted it.

My contributions were principally Porcelain, Enamels, and Glass, of which I have long had a small but very fair collection. Others contributed Pictures, Carvings, Sculpture, Indian Antiquities, Goldsmiths' Work, Minerals, Geological Specimens, Insects, Stuffed Birds—indeed whatever was likely to amuse or instruct.

The Lectures were based upon the objects exhibited.—Professor Owen illustrated Palæontology and Zoology; Mr. Ravenshaw, Mineralogy; Mr. Wm. Chapman, Historic Portraits; others gave experiments in Chemistry, Electricity, Hydraulics, and Photography; and I made my debüt on Pottery and Porcelain. A request to repeat my Lecture led me to prepare it with increased attention, and I now present it to the public in its amended form, as a convenient introduction to the present volume.

The few additional notes interspersed through the Catalogue, some within brackets denoting the painters on porcelain, are either by myself, Mr. Thomas Woods, the intelligent assistant of Messrs. Christie and Manson, or Mr. Burn, who has read the sheets with me through the press.

THE APPENDIX OF MONOGRAMS, which I deem the great feature of the volume, will, I hope, be found as useful and complete as anything of the kind yet produced. In the class Majolica the list might have been much enlarged; but without more positive information than we yet have respecting many unlocated marks, the collector would have derived little or no advantage. Some of the finest and most valuable specimens have no marks at all, while some that would rank well according to the mark, are of little value. A Xanto plate, marked and dated, may vary in value from five to a hundred guineas, while an unmarked plate, about which there is not the least positive information, may be worth even more than the larger sum.

In constructing this Appendix I have been mainly indebted to the valuable works of Messrs. Brongniart and Riocreux, especially their splendid volume, the "Musée Ceramique," from which I have copied all the monograms, with scarcely any variation. I am also indebted to that magnificent and well-executed work "Les Arts au Moyen Age ; par Du Sommerard," which every lover of the fine arts, that can afford it, should procure. The brochure of Passeri, on Majolica, as edited by Mons. Delange, has afforded me many additional marks, and some useful information. Labarte's "Arts of the Middle Ages;" Mr. Robinson's Descriptive Catalogue of the Soulages Collection; the Catalogues of the Museum of Practical Geology, by Sir Henry de la Beche, Mr. Trenham Reeks, and Mr. Robert Hunt; and the Manchester Catalogues; have all supplied something: and last, not least, Mr. Marryat's pleasing volume, of which a new and much improved edition has just been published under the care of his sister, Mrs. Palliser.

MR. PLANCHÉ'S NOTICE

AS PREFIXED TO THE SALE CATALOGUE.

I HAVE been requested to write a few introductory lines to this Catalogue, and feel it is one of the greatest compliments that could have been paid to me. Nothing I can say would enhance the value of such a collection, and I cannot therefore look on the request in any other light than that of a delicate mode of conferring upon me the privilege of publicly expressing the respect and regard which I have for nearly thirty years entertained for the kind friend, whose sudden and unexpected loss I so deeply deplore.

Distinguished amongst English Antiquaries by the perfection of his taste, as well as the extent of his knowledge, the difficulty of imposing upon him was increased by the necessity of the fabrication being fine enough in form, colour, or workmanship, to rival the masterpiece it simulated: to be, in fact, itself a gem of art, which it would not pay to produce as a relic of antiquity. Mr. BERNAL could be tempted by nothing that was inferior. Even his Pictures, though avowedly not selected for their value as paintings, but for their illustration of costume, have probably, taken as a whole, more merit in them than any similar collection in Europe. I am not presuming to offer this as my own opinion; I but echo that which I have so often heard from the lips of men considered the highest authorities in such matters, both amateurs and dealers.

With the treasures thus garnered up, it would be an honour to any antiquary to have his name in any way associated; and I can only repeat that mine has no claim to such a distinction, unless it be that I yield to none in regret for the departed, and in sympathy for his bereaved family.

AN
ILLUSTRATED LECTURE ON
POTTERY AND PORCELAIN, DELIVERED AT
RICHMOND, JULY 15TH AND 28TH, 1856,
ON OCCASION OF THE LOCAL EXHIBITION.

POTTERY must have been known to the world almost from the beginning of time, first as sunburnt or baked vessels of clay, called by the Italians, Terra Cotta; then as glazed and enamelled or vitrified ware, called terra invitriata; and lastly, as modelled or painted vessels, such as Etruscan vases, urns, &c.; and there are abundant records, as well in sacred as profane history, of its existence in every variety of form many centuries before the Christian era.

In the catacombs of Thebes, which are proved to be nearly four thousand years old, a series of drawings has been discovered, exhibiting the Potter's art as then practised, by which it appears that the clay was kneaded with the feet, worked at the wheel, baked in a cylindrical oven, and lastly painted. And judging by the completeness of all the appliances, this must have been an advanced stage of the art. The ancient potters took rank with the highest class of artists, and their praises are sung or said by many of the Greek and Roman classics.

The earliest specimen of unglazed ware in the present collection is an elegantly formed Roman Vase of reddish brown earth; but there are many earlier and finer in the British Museum.

Of glazed and enamelled ware, you see before you some Egyptian figures, rings, and beads, and several Etruscan vases.

Egyptian figures, rings, and beads of blue enamelled ware are of great antiquity, and are found in the tombs of Egypt; the largest of the rings here has intagliated hieroglyphics on its face, and is presumed to be a signet-ring. One of the little Egyptian figures is the god Isis; the other is the celebrated deity Thoth, the type of nearly all the best gifts to man, and the supposed inventor of writing.

The exquisite finish and fine colour of these examples of enamelled pottery shew that the art was more perfect in the age of the Pharaohs than it has been at some intermediate periods.

ETRUSCAN WARE, or as the earlier manufacture is now more learnedly called, Italo-Greek pottery, is traced back with certainty to five hundred years before the Christian era, at which period Phidias and other celebrated artists furnished designs for the potters; and if we may give credit to Herodotus, in his account of the pottery of Samos, it existed even ten centuries before Christ. The present examples will suffice to shew the character of the ware.

One specimen, a jug in the form of a negro slave's head, is remarkable for its curious and uncommon character, and for its lustrous black glaze, which is called Thericlean, because supposed to have been invented by Thericles of Corinth. But it is more remarkable for its ferruginous reticulated work, meant to represent hair, though more like a nutmeg-grater. By the side of it is another negro slave's head, with the same kind of reticulated work for hair, unglazed, and of great age. The Etruscan vase beyond them is interesting for the tasteful elegance of its form, and the spirited painting of the chimæra and dancing figures which cover it. The last to which I shall call your attention is an example of the simplest form—the ground of a yellowish red, and the figures in glazed black with white touches, which three colours are those principally used by the ancient potters. The white having always been put on after the vessel was baked and glazed, would not incorporate, and therefore easily wore off, so that scarcely any of the Etruscan vases are perfect in the white parts. The colours, however, though often damaged by abrasion, seem never to have faded, for those vases which have been well kept are as vivid as if they were the work of modern times.

Beyond this, it may be sufficient to say that every country had pottery of more or less perfection from very early periods—Babylon, Armenia, Arabia, Scandinavia, the Celtic tribes, South America, Mexico, and especially China, which claims for this art the highest antiquity—and examples of most may be seen in the British Museum, the India House, the Geological Museum, Marlborough House, and other collections.

GLASS followed Pottery, and was likewise in use long before the commencement of the Christian era. Pliny tells us that in very remote times it was accidentally discovered by some Phœnicians, who supporting their kettle on two blocks of native soda over a strong fire on the banks of the river Beus, produced transparent streams of an unknown liquid, which proved to be glass.* We know, at any rate, that the first glass makers were in Phœnicia and Egypt. Pliny praises the glass-makers of Sidon, and Herodotus and Theophrastus record the wonders of the glass houses of Tyre.

The specimens of Greek and Roman glass before you illustrate the perfection to which vitrification had been brought more than two thousand years ago. For lightness, colour, and form, they could not be surpassed by all the science of the present day. The small, light, ultramarine-blue bottle, decorated in three opaque colours, is an Amphora, of Greek workmanship, and being quite perfect, is of considerable value.

The knowledge which the ancients had of vitrification would naturally lead to the discovery of the enamel required for Porcelain; and there is reason to believe that it was made in the East, especially in China, at a very early period. The transition from glass to Porcelain is well illustrated in the small Roman Vase of white opaque glass before you. It is so entirely dotted with colour, yellow, red, and blue, that it has all the appearance of Porcelain.

The Middle ages did not, as far as we now know, add anything to the progress of the Ceramic art, although Venice, long before the fifteenth century, had achieved wonders in glass-work, and other countries excelled in enamelling, especially BYZANTIUM from the fourth to the thirteenth century,† and LIMOGES from the tenth to the sixteenth, and later. Of Byzantine work there is no specimen here, and of Limoges it will be more convenient to speak in another section. I will, therefore, make a great jump to Luca della Robbia, a Ceramic artist of the fourteenth century, of great and deserved fame.

LUCA DELLA ROBBIA studied under Leonardo, a skilful goldsmith of Florence, about the middle of the fourteenth century. Finding his genius for design cramped by the slow process of working in metal, he devoted himself first to sculpture in stone, and then to modelling in clay or wax, as being more easily manipulated. His first productions were in a whitish clay, without glaze, and proclaim the powers of the master. After many experiments, he succeeded in discovering an opaque, white, highly lustrous enamel, which gave to his clay forms the polish of glass, and the durability of marble. His subjects were mostly figures or bas-reliefs, adapted to the decoration of churches and palaces. He soon added colours, principally yellow, blue, green, and violet, upon white grounds.

His brothers and their descendants continued to work in the same style. One of them, Girolamo, was called to France to decorate the so-called Château de Madrid, the palace of Francis I. in the Bois de Boulogne, nicknamed the Château de Faïence. In the French Revolution this was recklessly demolished, and the beautiful decorations of Della Robbia fayence, which had cost upwards of £15,000, crushed to atoms, and made into cement.

As terra cotta and enamelled sculpture continued to be made by Luca della Robbia and his descendants for upwards of a century and a half, specimens of the later periods are not of very great rarity; but it is difficult to authenticate any of the first period, indeed they are scarcely to be met with out of Italy. Many of the churches and old buildings of Florence are still decorated with bas-relief figures of the Della Robbia school, and some of them are not unlikely to be by the founder himself. I have here, as a specimen of the ware, a broken but bold example of coloured fruits, which may or may not have escaped from the wreck of the Château de Faïence; and I have also a small group of figures of Raphaelesque beauty not unlikely to be by one of the Della Robbias; but the parts which are unglazed have, I suspect, been sand-papered and coloured afresh,—not an uncommon practice with Italian artists.

MAJOLICA, or as it is variously called Faenza, Gubbio, Umbrian, or Raphael Ware, is a beautiful enamelled earthenware of the end of the fifteenth and early part of the sixteenth century. Its original title of Majolica is supposed to have been derived from Majorca, because it much resembles, and was, perhaps, founded on the Moorish pottery and enamelled dishes brought from Majorca by the Pisans in the twelfth century, and afterwards by the other trading cities along the coast.

The Spanish Moors were, no doubt, far advanced in the manufacture of decorative pottery, as we see by their painted tiles and magnificent vase in the Alhambra; and during the whole of the Italian Majolica period they still continued to supply Europe with their beautiful works.

Their iridescent or metallic lustre plates, of the fourteenth and fifteenth century, certainly have very much the character of the early Italian Majolica, and the patterns in both are often purely Alhambraic. An early and fine enamelled plate of Moresque pattern will show the character of the Majolica manufacture, and a so-called Hispano-Arab Majolica plate will show the Italian version of it.

Although it seems very likely that the term Majolica was derived from Majorca, there is no evidence that it was so called among writers earlier than Scaliger,* who wrote in 1557, and Ferrari,† who lived in the next century. It appears at first to have been called FAENZA, where it was principally made or exported. This want of positive testimony permits me to propound a theory which may at least amuse. I assume that the term may have arisen from the family of MAIOLI, (called Maggioli) of Ferrara, who, at the end of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth century, were promoters of the fine arts, and distinguished for taste and vertu. Aldus, then at Venice, printed for Lorenzo Maioli in 1497; and some of the finest specimens of Italian binding, between 1500 and 1530, bear the inscription "Maioli et amicorum," and are called Maioli bindings. These are now as valuable as Majolica dishes.

Majolica appears to have been first made at Faenza and

* In his "Exercitationes Exoticæ," first published at Paris in 1557.

† In his "Origines Linguae Italicae," Padua, 1676.

Pesaro, then at Gubbio, and afterwards at Urbino, the birth-place of Raphael, Perugia, Ferrara, Monte-lupo, Naples, and other places in Italy. It is said that Raphael furnished patterns for this ware, and even painted some of it: but there is no positive evidence; and as he died in 1520, and the best specimens of art, as regards drawing, are after rather than before his death, it has by many been thought improbable. Indeed, Guidobaldo, Duke of Urbino from 1538 to 1574, the great patron of Majolica, is known to have begun collecting Raphael's sketches several years after that painter's decease, for the purpose of decorating pottery. Previously, Andrea Mantegna, Marc Antonio, and the early masters of the Bolognese School, whose works had become familiar by engravings, were the type of nearly all the early Majolica paintings. After this period, the designs become more Raphelesque,—an evidence of which is in an Urbino plate before you, dated 1538. But the best specimen here of Majolica is a plate painted by FRA XANTO, of Urbino, in 1539, the second year of Guidobaldo's rule. It is very fine and very perfect, and has the ruby metallic lustre, or iridescence, which is a distinguishing feature in this ware, and the peculiar characteristic of the works of MAESTRO GIORGIO, one of the most esteemed of the early Ceramic artists. The subject of the painting is an incident in the life of the tyrant Dionysius. One of his flatterers, Damocles, in admiration of the tyrant's wealth and power, pronounced him the happiest man on earth; on which Dionysius prevailed on him to undertake a season of royalty, and test the happiness which a sovereign is supposed to enjoy.

You see here the so-called feast of Damocles, where a sword is suspended over his head by a single hair, as a symbol of the dangers to which a king is exposed. The costume, the furniture of the table, and other incidentals of the tableau, give the plate an interest independent of its technical merits.*

At Mr. Bernal's sale, was a plate supposed to represent Raphael and Fornarina, in the studio of an artist, employed in painting a piece of Majolica. The general impression seemed to be that it was painted by Raphael himself, or at least during his life-time; and under that fiction, it sold for * Now at Manchester, till October, 1857.

£120, but it was evidently painted long after Raphael's death. The plate, however, is one of great beauty, and of considerable value as a work of art.*

During all the great Majolica period, and even to the end of the century, it was the fashion for lovers to present their mistresses, or their betrothed, with small ornamental pieces, called Amatoria—generally plates, dishes, or vases—adorned with the portrait and christian name of their favoured fair. They are for the most part more interesting for costume than the beauty of the lady. The plates before you—one early, the other late—are good specimens of this class.

The artistic character of Majolica declined, and almost ceased, before the end of the sixteenth century, but was revived in the next century, at Naples. Of this late, or Neapolitan ware, the present jug and plate are good examples. The colour, as you will see, is thinner and colder than the earlier specimens, and the drawing more correct. A very similar jug, but bolder and more vivid in its colouring, is supposed to be of the manufacture of MONTE-LUPO.

In the meantime, the taste for Majolica had spread to other countries, particularly to France, in the reign of Francis the First, no doubt introduced by Katharine de Medicis, daughter of the Duke of Urbino, who had married the king's son, afterwards Henry II., in 1533. This kind of enamelled earthenware, then termed Fayence (supposed from Faenza, the great emporium of Pottery), was in full perfection when Henry II. ascended the throne in 1547, and so continued till his death in 1558. The exquisite manufacture of this latter period is now distinguished as the Faïence de Henri et Diane, and is of extraordinary value. This may well excuse my not having any to show you.

Some French antiquaries, it may be here observed, claim a greater age for the French term Fayence, and insist that it is derived from Fayence, an obscure town in France, where there is said to have been a Pottery long before it existed at Faenza, in Italy.

The Fayence, now called NEVERS, was, it should appear, manufactured during these early periods, but came to no perfection till Louis Gonzaga, kinsman of Katharine de Medicis, succeeded to the Dukedom of Nevers, in 1565, and imported artists from Italy. It was at first of fine Italian character, similar to Majolica, but in time degenerated to very ordinary Fayence, such as you see before you, which is a piece in the two characteristic colours of this ware, blue and orange.

* Now at the Manchester Exhibition.

PALISSY, that is, the Fayence or enamelled Pottery which passes under his name, was made in France, about the middle of the sixteenth century. The discoverer was Bernard Palissy, a man of humble birth, and almost without education, but extremely ingenious, and a most persevering enthusiast. His history is a romance.

From a low condition he became a land surveyor, acquired a taste for experimental chemistry, and taught himself painting by copying the works of the great masters; and being one day struck with the beauty of a piece of enamelled pottery, valued at a high price, set about discovering the secret of its composition. In making experiments during several years, he exhausted every means in pursuit of his object,—spent all the money he could earn or borrow—burnt his tables, chairs, and other furniture, and even some of his flooring, to provide fuel for his furnace,—and reduced his wife and family to the last stage of distress. At length, however, in 1550, after between fifteen and sixteen years of experiment, he succeeded in discovering the composition of various enamels, and was patronized by all the great. But, in 1562, the year of the massacre of the Huguenots at Vassy, fresh troubles beset him, for he was a firm Protestant, and the edicts against the Protestants, followed by the massacre of St. Bartholomew in 1572, exposed him to continual danger and persecution. And though he escaped these for a time by royal protection in the Tuilleries, where many of his best works were produced, he could not, some years later (1576), escape the leaguers, who kept him in prison till his death, which took place in 1589.

The Fayence of Palissy is very peculiar, always, as far as I have observed it, in relief and colours, and generally copied from subjects near at hand, especially fish, frogs, lizards, shells, and plants, found in the vicinity of Paris. The principal specimen here is a fountain of exquisite workmanship—one of those pieces which he called Rustique figuline. It is ornamented with shells, fish, and reptiles, of the Seine, less gorgeous, but more painter-like than any other specimen I have yet seen.* The other specimens are : a plate, covered with good-humoured faces, or masks, exactly like one in Mr. Bernal's collection ; and one perforated like a sieve, and beautifully decorated with masks and flowers, especially the little daisy called Marguerite, which he is supposed to have adopted as his mark in compliment to Marguerite de Navarre, his Protestant protectress. Perforated work either in pottery or porcelain is always of difficult workmanship, and bespeaks the artist.

Next follows, as far as my specimens help me, the Pottery of Germany, Flanders, and England. The oldest here is a Cologne Jug, dated 1615. The earliest dated vessels of this kind of enamelled pottery yet known are about 1540 ; but there is printed evidence that the ware was made much earlier. German hard pottery or stone ware was made at the beginning of the sixteenth century ; the specimen here is not dated, but probably about 1560, and, I think, of Nuremberg manufacture. The polychromatic enamels, and the correct drawing, show a high state of the art.

The fine large Turkey, a soup tureen and cover, which figures at a distance, is a specimen of ROUEN FAIENÇE,† or, as it used to be called, French Delft, and not unlikely to be one of those pieces of table service which Louis XIV. substituted for his silver plate, when in 1714 he heroically sent it all to the mint to defray the expenses of the war.

The DELFT specimen before you is of the seventeenth century, and of Japanese character, as was most of the Dutch pottery for many years. It was by means of the Dutch that England was principally supplied with the porcelain of China and Japan ; and as the supply was long unequal to the demand, they were led to imitation, in which they were very expert. The Delft manufacturers were in the habit of painting the common white ware with brilliant colours and passing it off as Chinese, but these pieces are now easily detected.

There are some remarkably fine specimens of Delft in our public and private collections ; and this ware cannot but be interesting to an Englishman, as being, so to say, the parent of our native pottery.

We have no authentic records of English pottery till late in

* Now at Manchester.

† Now at Manchester.

the reign of Elizabeth, although there is no doubt that it was manufactured in various parts of this country during the Roman period, and very early in Staffordshire. There is a jug, dated 1594, in the Museum of Economic Geology, and several early pieces in the British Museum, but the most interesting relic of that period—the Elizabethan—is the Shakspeare Jug, of the date of 1603. Some think that even this was made in Flanders, or at least by Dutch or German workmen.*

Our domestic vessels and utensils had previously been either gold, silver, electrum, or some other metal, or earthen ware supplied from abroad. When the workers in metal found that their trade was damaged by the extensive introduction of earthenware from the Low Countries, it is supposed they would apply their moulds to the purposes of pottery—hence the metallic forms of some of the early pieces. Here is an instance of English ware, which has all the appearance of being cast in a goldsmith's mould.

After the age of Elizabeth, at different periods, there were several attempts at enamelled stone ware in England, especially at Fulham, about 1640; Lambeth, in 1680; and Staffordshire, in 1700; but little of a positive character is known of these early English manufactures, nor were they of any consequence till the time of Wedgwood.

WEDGWOOD deserves especial notice. His career began about 1760, and continued till 1795, when he died. The son of a poor potter, at Burslem, his education was of the most moderate kind. But he fought through adverse circumstances with as much endurance as Palissy himself, and by extraordinary energy and a diligent study of his art, succeeded in placing himself at the head of European manufacturers. His early or cream-coloured ware was honoured with the patronage of Queen Charlotte, and thence called Queen's Ware; afterwards, when he succeeded in giving to pottery the varied colours and brilliant glaze of porcelain, all the varieties of his manufacture bore his own name, which was stamped upon it. He employed Flaxman, among other distinguished artists, for his designs; and his earthenware cameos were so much esteemed, that they ranked in value with the choicest productions of Dresden and Sèvres. The specimens before you illustrate his best period. The Vase is covered with beautiful designs of Flaxman-like character, the Cameos are gems of minute workmanship. Wedgwood's enthusiasm for his art was such, that he bid as far as a thousand pounds for the Portland Vase when it was offered for sale; and though he did not obtain it, he got permission to copy it; and not being allowed to mould from it, lest it should sustain injury, he paid Mr. Webber four hundred pounds for making a model.* He then published fifty copies, at fifty guineas each, by subscription.†

* It is now pretty well ascertained, from certain peculiarities of the ware and form, that this famous Shakspeare jug is about a century later than its hitherto accredited date. There have been a great many fac-similes made of it at the potteries, which have found purchasers at about £3 3s. each.

This celebrated Vase, which, as every one knows, was broken, a few years ago, in the British Museum, by a mad fanatic, is composed of two layers of vitrified paste or glass, one white, the other blue; so perfect an imitation of an onyx cameo, that it was long regarded as a natural production. It was discovered about the middle of the tenth century, and is said to be many centuries earlier, and of Greek workmanship. Till it came into the possession of the Duchess of Portland, it was known to Europe as the Barberini Vase.

ENAMELS form a direct link between Pottery and Porcelain, it will therefore be convenient to introduce the mention of them here. For early Byzantine examples, I must refer you to the British Museum, where there is a valuable collection. Limoges, of which there are several specimens before you, is a painted enamel on copper, generally of great beauty, which prevailed universally as an article of decoration till gradually superseded by the introduction of the higher classes of faience and porcelain. It attained its greatest perfection in the sixteenth century, and went entirely out in the seventeenth. The examples before you illustrate several different qualities and periods. The earliest are two beautifully-wrought classical miniatures—Themistocles and Cleomenes—in rich colours and gold, probably by Leonard Limousin, about 1535. The next is a cup,

* This statement is on the authority of Wedgwood's contemporary, Mr. Parkes, the chemist.

† It is asserted by some that he did not finish off and complete half the intended number, and that only those marked at the bottom in pencilled figures are what were actually delivered to subscribers.

carved out of a solid piece of agate, and mounted on a stem of Limoges, in the time of Francis I., formerly the property of Mr. Beckford, of Fonthill. Near it is a cup, with ornaments in relief, and Roman portraits in colours, by J. Laudin, one of the most prolific of the Limoges artists. The two other cups, with mythological and hunting subjects, are of a later date, and, it should seem, in the decadence of the art.

The Limoges picture in chiaro-scuro touched with gold, is copied from Albert Durer's celebrated engraving of "Christ with Martha and Mary," and is probably about 1550, and the artist Raymond. The other picture in rich colours—"Christ on the Mount"—and which, for an enamel, is of rather a large size—is in the manner of Lucas Cranach, and preserves all the treatment of the early German School. Like the preceding, it is unmarked, but may be guessed at near 1550. The last is a small plate, probably by Jean Courtois, similar in general character to the well-known plates of the Months, of which there were several in Mr. Bernal's collection.* The subject is "Abraham offering up his son Isaac," in black and white, or chiaro-scuro, tinted with red and gold, and surrounded by an arabesque border; the back is ornamented with a female bust, and likewise surrounded by arabesques.

It is not my intention to descant upon enamels, but rather to confine myself more immediately to pottery and porcelain; but while I am on the subject, I cannot help calling your attention to a CHINESE ENAMEL—a bottle and stand of exquisite workmanship,—of a class called cloisonné, and probably of the twelfth century; and also to a beautiful enamel from Horace Walpole's collection—the Countess of Conway—by Zincke, a Germano-English artist, who has never been surpassed; and lastly, to some fine miniatures, chiefly of the Court of Charles the Second, by both the elder and younger Henry Bone.

We will now turn to PORCELAIN, and begin with CHINA, in which kingdom it no doubt originated.

Porcelain is an intermediate substance between pottery and glass, more translucent than the one, more opaque than the other, and presumed to be of Chinese origin; either before, or in the beginning of the Christian Era. Be this as it may, there is evidence of its use in the fifth century; and in the beginning of the fourteenth, the famous porcelain Tower of Nankin was built, three hundred and thirty feet high, and is still standing. It consists of nine stories of enamelled bricks or tiles, in five colours, white, red, blue, green, and brown. Indeed, the Chinese would probably have built our Crystal Palace in porcelain had it been projected at Nankin.

* See Nos. 1467—1470, and 1490, at pp. 153—160 of present Catalogue.

Chinese porcelain did not come fully into Europe till the sixteenth century, when it was brought first by the Portuguese, and then by the Dutch and Italian traders. The term porcelain is supposed to be derived from the Portuguese word porcellana, which originally signified a little pig, then a cownie shell, from the similarity of its shape to the back of a pig, and afterwards a porcelain cup. Dr. Johnson whimsically derives the term from "pour cent années," from a notion to which I shall presently allude. In England it was at first called Gonbron, because at that settlement in the Persian Gulf the East India Company used to exchange for it with the Chinese.

The Chinese kept their manufacture a great secret, and pretended it was made of egg-shells, sea-shells, and other matters, mixed in given proportions and buried for eighty or a hundred years (that is, pour cent années); and for two centuries Europe, led astray perhaps by these fictions, endeavoured in vain to discover the composition of their white transparent paste.

Every nation seems to have attached great value to Chinese porcelain, and justly, for we are told that their fine specimens were made with so much care, that out of two hundred pieces they would sometimes destroy a hundred and ninety-nine as not sufficiently perfect.

It is recorded by Sir Thomas Roe, in 1615, that the Great Mogul had one of his attendants of rank whipped for breaking a cup, and then sent him to China, at his own expense, to buy another.

You have before you a specimen of the so called egg-shell china, a cup and saucer, which is extremely thin and transparent; but it is not necessarily so thin, as you see by the enamelled plate painted with birds, which is likewise egg-shell. The other specimens are an early vase, with raised flowers, not very unlike Dresden work, and a little monster teapot with chimæra for the handle and spout ; also a citron-yellow cup of very pure colour. This yellow porcelain was exclusively made for imperial use, and its export prohibited. Mr. Beckford had some of these yellow cups and saucers, which at his sale produced so much excitement among collectors, and sold for such extravagant prices, that it was nick-named the yellow fever. The Chinese attach great value to their crackle, which, though it looks like damaged glaze, is produced by art ; also to their ruby colour, their sea-green and their turquoise blue. A specimen of the latter, a josse or kylin, from Mr. Bernal's sale,* supposed to be five or six hundred years old, will show you the perfection to which the Chinese had brought this favourite colour, which, though successfully imitated at Sèvres, and only at Sèvres, has never been surpassed.

I will not dwell longer on the porcelain of the Chinese, which would require a volume for its history, save to mention their ingenuity. The sea-green cup in my hand is called the Cup of Tantalus, and by the French "Surprise hydraulique." If you merely fill it to the shoulder of the blue Chinaman within, it will hold water, but add another drop, and it all runs out ; this is accomplished by means of a concealed syphon. They have many other hydraulic and scientific ingenuities in porcelain, which may be seen in some of our museums.

JAPANESE PORCELAIN has much similarity to that of China, and existed at almost as remote a period. The paste is generally more brilliant, the glaze tinged with blue, and the ornamentation simpler and bolder, often in relief. The favourite colours of the Japanese are yellow, blue, and red, and they excel in perforated work.

The Portuguese were the first to bring it into Europe, early in the sixteenth century, and were themselves in the next century driven out of Japan by meddling, through their missionaries, with the ware, getting legends of saints substituted for the native patterns. Some of the specimens, now regarded as the most curious and interesting, are those in which the Jesuits have covertly introduced the cross, or some other emblem of Christianity. The yellow holy water vessels before you must have been of the Jesuits' period, as they belong to Catholic worship.

The first European manufactory of true porcelain was at Meissen, near DRESDEN, in the beginning of the eighteenth century. John Frederick Böttcher, an apothecary's assistant at Berlin, being suspected of alchemy, had been obliged to fly his native country to avoid prosecution, and took refuge in Dresden. Here the king, after questioning him closely as to his knowledge of the art of making gold, placed him in the royal laboratory under Tschirnhous, who was then engaged in searching for an universal medicine. Böttcher, in the course of his experiments, unexpectedly produced a composition which assumed many of the characteristics of oriental porcelain. The king, perceiving the importance of the discovery, immediately transferred him to the Castle of Albrechtsberg, at Meissen, and afterwards, with his companion workmen, under an escort of cavalry, to the fortress of Königstein, where he continued his experiments. In 1707, having obtained the confidence of the king, he returned to Dresden, where he pursued his experiments with great vigour and eventual success. His first productions were only a kind of semi-porcelain, or red stone ware ;* but in 1709, he succeeded in producing white porcelain, which, though it at first bent and cracked in the fire, was brought to perfection in 1715. This is generally admitted to have been the first European discovery of porcelain, and its quality has never been exceeded.

Böttcher was so devoted to his object, that on making some great experiment, he is said to have sat up five days and nights watching the furnace.

How he composed his artificial paste is not now known ; but the natural paste, or kaolin, which he afterwards so successfully used, was discovered by accident. A rich iron-master, named Schnorr, in riding over his estate, found that his horse's feet continually stuck fast in some soft and perfectly white earth. Hair powder being at that time a great object of commerce, it occurred to him that it might be made of this earth, and experience justified his discernment. This powder soon becoming an article of general use in Saxony, fell into the hands of Böttcher, who perceiving, by its weight, that it must be an earth, tried it in the fire, and found, to his great joy, that it was the very material he wanted, that is, true kaolin. Upon this, by order of the king, it was carried to the manufactory in sealed barrels, by persons sworn to secrecy, and its exportation strictly prohibited. Indeed, everything connected with the Dresden manufactory was carried on with a degree of secrecy that in the present day would seem quite ridiculous: the workmen were bound by the most solemn oaths, and were confined within a castle, having all the character of a fortress, which they were never allowed to leave, and into which no stranger was permitted to enter. "Be secret until Death," was the motto hung up in every department.

The specimens of Dresden before you are of three different periods: of the first, or Böttcher ware, a red or jasper-coloured teapot, with Chinese figures in colour and gold; of the middle period, some shaped cups and saucers, and a sucrier and cover, of very fine paste, beautifully painted with Watteau subjects;* and of the late, or what is called the Marcolini period, a cup, cover, and stand, the latter with a guard in the centre of it; the colour is gros-blue, and the designs after Angelica Kauffman.

The Dresden mark is, and for more than a century always has been, two electoral swords crossed, so that the Dresden of the present day can only be distinguished from the original by a practised eye.

Notwithstanding all the vigilance of the Elector of Saxony and his gens-d'armes, one of the workmen, named Stöbzel, escaped about or just before Böttcher's death, which took place in 1719, and he got safely to Vienna.

The importance of porcelain, as an article of commerce, was so strongly recognised by the German princes, that he was received with open arms. Thus arose, in 1720, the great manufactory of VIENNA, which has since produced some wonderful specimens of workmanship, especially in gilding, but the paste is not equal to Dresden. The specimens here are a cup, cover, and saucer, painted in classical taste, a plate in raised gold work of most perfect workmanship, and a plate richly painted within a raised gold border, subject, "The Education of Cato."

The Vienna mark is a shield with the arms of Austria.

The secret having got to Vienna, could not easily be concealed; and as every state regarded it as scarcely second to gold mines, it transpired by degrees in a great many directions, notwithstanding the continued precautions of the Elector of Saxony, and the jealousy with which each successive possessor endeavoured to keep it from spreading. As workmen increased they dispersed, and before the middle of the century arose the manufactories of Höchst, in Mayence; Fürstenberg, in Brunswick; Frankenthal, in the Palatinate; Nymphenburg, in Bavaria; Baden, Ludwigsburg, and Berlin. The men who possessed the secret continually changed masters as opportunities offered, and among these was especially one Ringler, who seems always to have been open to the best bidder.

At all these places some very fine specimens were occasionally produced. Höchst is famous for its statuettes and for the violet-red and deep blue colours of its porcelain of the early period, but the paste is not quite equal to Dresden. Fürstenberg comes very close to Dresden, but, excepting some few instances, is inferior to it both in paste and painting. Frankenthal, often called "Carl Theodor," because for a long period under his patronage, produced very good porcelain, but nothing equal to Dresden, though conducted by Hanung, through whom and his son hard paste was introduced at Sèvres. Ludwigsburg, better known as Kronenburg, is often of high quality, the figures well modelled, and the paintings executed with artistic excellence. Drawings in bistre were a favourite decoration. The paste was imported from France, and the best German artists employed. The figures and plateau before you I think confirm my character of it.

Passing Nymphenburg, Baden, and other early manufactures of hard paste, of which there are no specimens here, I come to BERLIN, which is second only to Dresden, and in some instances quite equal to it. The Berlin factory was founded in 1751, by means of a merchant who bought the secret from some Höchst workmen. During the Seven Years' War, 1756-1763, Frederic the Great, alive to the importance of what was becoming a staple article of commerce, transported, by force, all the best Dresden artists to his own capital, Berlin, where they continued and settled, to the great damage for a time of the parent establishment. The plates before you are of different periods, early and late, and beautifully painted; the cup and saucer, ornamented with views of Berlin and Potsdam, is part of a service presented to the Duke of York by the King of Prussia, nearly half a century ago.

The Berlin mark is a sceptre.

We now come to what may be called the great period of soft paste, which begins with CHELSEA. Though a factory existed there in the reign of Queen Anne, it does not appear to have produced anything but ordinary ware till some time after the Hanoverian accession, and did not reach perfection till about 1750, when, under the direction of a foreigner named Spremont, the Duke of Cumberland, son of George I., then about thirty years old, took the manufactory under his especial protection, and is said to have provided funds for it. A year or two before his death, which took place in 1765, the director Spremont retired, which circumstance, added to the influx of foreign porcelain, ruined the establishment, and the models and workmen were transferred to Derby. During its zenith, the porcelain made there was of singular beauty, especially the Vases, now worth fabulous prices. A set of seven were lately sold at three thousand pounds.—But Chelsea was never cheap; for we are told by Horace Walpole, that even in 1763, a service made for the Duke of Mecklenburgh cost twelve hundred pounds at the factory.

The paste of Chelsea porcelain is extremely soft, and will not bear tampering with by a second firing. The predominant colours are deep blue, often a little wavy, claret red, canary yellow, and sea green, with rich and solid gilding; and the ornaments are generally birds, especially peacocks. The cup and saucer before you, and the Shepherd and Shepherdess, are examples of the best period. The vases—one set with landscapes, the other of Oriental character—are probably a little earlier. Excepting the last, they all bear the usual Chelsea mark—an anchor in red or gold.

BOW CHINA, produced at rather a considerable establishment at Stratford-le-Bow, is about coeval with that of Chelsea, and ceased about the same time, or rather before. Its ordinary ware is of so much the same character, as scarcely to be distinguishable when neither are marked. It is generally shaped and tastefully embossed, sometimes with a bee modelled or painted in a conspicuous part, but the usual mark is a triangle. I never heard of any highly wrought and expensive vases such as there are of Chelsea; the finest known specimen is perhaps a painted bowl in the British Museum, which is accompanied by a curious account of the factory. The only specimen here is a shaped tea-pot and stand, ornamented with raised tulip leaves in colours, marked at the bottom with triangles in a circle. The paste is very white, and in general quite as good as Chelsea.

Next follows the so-called CHELSEA-DERBY. The models, and most of the workmen, having, as I have just said, been transferred from Chelsea to this factory, it produced, after 1765, some very fine porcelain, but never anything quite equal to the best specimens of its predecessor; and the paste, though fine, is somewhat less transparent. This factory, now long discontinued, was in full operation in 1777, as we learn from Dr. Johnson, who says that the china was beautiful, but as dear as silver. The bright blue vases and the flesh-coloured candelabra figures are of this manufacture, and have the usual mark of a D crossed by an anchor.

We now come to Worcester, the most important in a mercantile sense of all the English manufactories of porcelain, whether soft or hard. The factory was established in 1751 by Dr. Wall, a physician, well skilled in chemistry, who had successfully employed himself in researches and experiments towards the improvement of porcelain. To him is attributed the first idea of transferring printed patterns to porcelain, an invention of very considerable importance. At first an imitation of the Nankin blue and white ware, as well as of the Japan, both then very popular in this country, were the principal articles of manufacture; but very soon the Sèvres and Dresden patterns, especially the bleu-de-roi and salmon-scale grounds of the former, and the birds, flowers, and insects of the latter, were successfully copied. The paste, even of the first and best periods, distinguished as Old Worcester, is not quite so fine as Chelsea, although I think quite equal to the generality of Derby, and it possessed the advantage of keeping its colour in use, without cracking in the glaze. No porcelain before or since has ever been more deservedly popular.

These works passed in 1783 to Mr. Flight, afterwards Flight and Barr; in 1839 to Messrs Chamberlain, and in 1850 to Messrs. Kerr and Binns, who now conduct them with great spirit. The specimens here are a small sugar vase and cover, of old Worcester, of which the paste and gilding are worthy of Chelsea; a flower vase on stand, signed Flight, Barr, and Barr, charmingly painted with passion flowers, on a light blue ground, and for which I remember being asked five guineas more than thirty years ago; a teapot and stand, with the arms and supporters of Nelson, part of a service made for him by Messrs. Chamberlain in 1802, when the freedom of the city was conferred upon him; and a cup and saucer of extremely thin or egg-shell china, the sample of a tea service recently made by Messrs. Kerr and Binns for Her Majesty.

I have no specimens of the many other English manufactories, past and present, and no time to consider them, but I cannot conclude this section without a tribute to Messrs. Minton of Stoke, several of whose beautiful productions are exhibited here by an immediate neighbour. Their decorative porcelain, as here seen in plates and vases, and their imitations of Majolica and Palissy, are quite equal, if not superior to, anything that can now be produced at Sèvres, while they are infinitely cheaper; and their Parian figures, a manufacture, I believe, of their own creation, are unrivalled for skilful workmanship and grace. The elaborate and highly wrought figures and vases in bisquit, in the same group, are, I am told, not by Mr. Minton, but by Messrs. Alcock, who excel in this department.

Those who would know more of our present English manufacturers, must consult the Jury reports of the Exhibition of 1851.*

This concludes my rapid sketch of the 'pâte tendre' of England, and I now turn to that of France, beginning with Sèvres, the most renowned of all.

SÈVRES.

This beautiful porcelain originated at ST. CLOUD, where an artist named Morin, after more than twenty-five years of experiment, succeeded in discovering an artificial soft paste. In 1735, a runaway carried the secret to CHANTILLY; and in 1740, it was conveyed in like fashion to VINCENNES. It was not, however, till several years later, that it arrived at perfection, and not till 1753, when Louis XV. took a share in the establishment, that its recognised date commenced. Three years after this, the factory became too small for its extending operations, and was removed to Sèvres.

* I have lately been told that among the present manufacturers, Messrs. Rose, of Coalbrookdale, hold a distinguished position for their fine porcelain, and especially for their clever imitations of Sèvres and Dresden. Their principal agents are Messrs. Danells, of Bond Street.

The extraordinary perfection to which this porcelain arrived, is especially attributable to the patronage of Madame de Pompadour, who, from 1744 to 1764, was the strenuous supporter of all the elegant arts.

The 'pâte tendre' manufacture, however, was limited to the use of the wealthy, and never became a staple article of commerce, as the difficulty of its composition, and the loss sustained by its liability to fall in the process of firing, made it of slow produce, and very expensive. The true porcelain, or hard paste, such as was used by the Chinese, and had recently been discovered at Dresden, still remained unknown at Sèvres, in defiance of the unremitting researches made to discover the secret. In 1761, G. A. Hanung, son of the founder of the Frankenthal factory, sold them the secret; but it was comparatively useless, for want of the white earth called Kaolin, which had not been found in France, notwithstanding the diligent enquiries of scientific men.

Chance led to its discovery in 1768. A poor woman, named Darnet, the wife of a surgeon at St. Yrieix, near Limoges, found some unctuous earth in a ravine, which she thought might be used as a cheap substitute for soap. On showing it to her husband, who was aware of the enquiries made for a porcelain earth, he took it to a neighbouring chemist, through whose means it was proved to be the true Kaolin. This led to the hard paste manufacture at Sèvres, which, from 1769 to the present time, has been on a very extensive scale, and given employment to thousands all over the kingdom.

The woman who discovered it was, in 1825, still living, and in poverty, unable to return home for want of means. She applied to Mons. Brongniart, then the superintendent of Sèvres, upon whose recommendation Louis XVIII., on being made acquainted with her miserable condition, granted her a pension from the civil list.

Notwithstanding this important discovery of true Kaolin, soft paste continued to be used, for the higher objects of art, till 1804, as the artists found they could not produce such brilliant effects in glaze and colouring on hard paste as were yielded by the softer material.

The value of Sèvres consists in its creamy and pearly softness, the beauty of its painting, and the depth of its glaze; and these qualities are only united in great perfection in the pdte tendre of the early period. I have, however, seen some specimens of 'hard paste,' which, as works of art in respect to painting, could not be surpassed.

All descriptions of old Sèvres are now collected with eagerness, and sell for high prices; but 'pieces de luxe,' which are generally painted by the best artists on grounds of 'bleu de roi,' 'gros bleu,' 'turquoise,' 'Rose Dubarry,' 'jonquille' (a canary yellow), 'vert-pré' (a bright green), or 'oeil de perdrix' (partridge-eye), sell at auctions for sums almost fabulous. At Mr. Bernal's sale, a pair of Rose Dubarry Vases (No. 469) sold for £1942 10s.; a pair of turquoise Vases (No. 470) for £1417 10s.; a single bleu de roi Vase (599) for £871 10s.; a single green Vase, with a painting after Greuze (No. 597), for £388 10s.; a cup and saucer (No. 451), painted by Morin, for £160; and a jewelled cup and saucer (No. 571), was thought cheap at £80. And since Mr. Bernal's sale, this kind of property has increased in price rather than diminished.

The specimens before you, though not of this extravagant character, are fine, and illustrate the different periods and qualities. The earliest is a cup "bleu du roi," of the Vincennes period, being marked B, which stands for 1754. The next is a sucrier and cover of 'gros-bleu,' which is of a deeper shade than 'bleu de roi,' marked M, that is 1764; the third is a cup of turquoise colour, painted in medallions, and well gilt, marked P, which is 1768, the year before the use of hard paste; the fourth is a 'Rose Dubarry' cup and cover of soft paste, ornamented with a miniature worthy of Greuze, but without any mark beyond the double L, but probably about 1780.

The others are cups or plates, of different periods and colours, mostly of soft paste; but there are several of hard paste so beautifully painted that, as works of art, seem to me quite as interesting. The large plaque (20 inches by 14) in a gilt frame, which looks like an enamel, is a copy of a very fine picture by Karl du Jardin, formerly in the Louvre. It is said to have been executed at Sèvres during the Napoleon period, for a Russian nobleman, at an agreed price of 3500 francs.

While the establishment at Sèvres was progressing, manufactories of soft paste porcelain arose in several other parts of France, of which CHANTILLY and TOURNAY, both represented here by good specimens, were among the best, and are occasionally very fine. Omitting the many hard paste manufactories of this period, I will say a few words of ITALY and SPAIN, and then conclude.

CAPO DI MONTE is undoubtedly the most beautiful of Italian porcelain. What is recognised under this name is always, I believe, moulded in high relief, and the best quality richly coloured and gilt. The earlier manufacture is less brilliant than the later, both in paste and colouring, but all are very valuable. Owing to the large prices which some specimens produced at Lady Blessington's sale—a cream ewer twenty-six guineas*—an inundation of forgeries has come in from the neighbourhood of Naples; so that it requires great caution not to be cheated. My specimens are two plaques, one green, the other white, of the Cæsars, and a cup and saucer.

DOCCIA, in the neighbourhood of Florence, had a manufactory of porcelain, but hard, a few years before Capo di Monte. It is now one of the largest in Europe, employing, it is said, upwards of 2000 persons. Its early productions are not equal, either in paste or treatment, to those of the present century. The cup and saucer before you, tastefully painted in medallions, and bearing Florentine arms, is a favourable specimen of this manufacture.†

VENICE had a manufactory which produced a fine enamelled pottery, called in England "Venus Purselayne," long before the cities we have just mentioned, and appears also to have made porcelain at an early period. We know that our Chelsea factory was originally carried on by glass-workers from Venice, and there is so much similarity between the best periods of Venetian and Chelsea porcelain, that it seems very probable the same workmen were concerned, which is further confirmed by both having adopted an anchor as the factory mark. The beautiful plate before you,* though distinctly marked with the Venetian anchor, is so exactly like Chelsea, both in paste and decoration, that it might easily be mistaken for it.

I have nothing more to say of Italy; and of SPAIN can merely refer to the factory taken from Capo di Monte in 1759 by Charles III., and transferred to BUEN RETIRO, a Royal palace near Madrid. This porcelain, which is very much like Capo di Monte, is extremely rare and beautiful. There are no specimens here, and very few anywhere, it being extremely rare.

And here I must conclude with a short quotation from that sprightly letter-writer, Lady Mary Wortley Montague.

“Old china is below nobody’s taste, since it has been the Duke of Argyll’s, whose understanding has never been doubted either by his friends or enemies.”

OLD CHELSEA.

The establishment of the Chelsea manufactory is not correctly known. It became one of importance in 1745, since the company which at that time desired the exclusive privilege of establishing a Porcelain manufactory at Vincennes (subsequently that at Sevres), urged the benefit that France would gain by having works which should exclude the German and English porcelain.

It was especially patronised by George II., who procured models workmen, and even materials, from Saxony and Brunswick.

The period of the greatest excellence of the Chelsea Porcelain is considered to have been between 1750 and 1763; and there was so much demand for it, that dealers are described as surrounding the doors of the works, purchasing the pieces as soon as they were fired, and large prices were paid for them.

Mr. Marryat quotes part of a letter from Horace Walpole to Sir Horace Mann, of the 4th March, 1763, in which he mentions having seen a set of Chelsea Porcelain about to be presented by the King and Queen to the Duke of Mecklenberg, which was to cost 1200*l.*

The works were discontinued in 1764, and the manufactory was then removed to Derby.

This Lot, at the Stowe sale, August 17th, 1848, no. 304, produced only four pounds, and was afterwards sold to Mr. Bernal for five pounds.

In the Stowe Catalogue, the subject is simply described as “an interior, with an artist painting the Majolica ware.” In Mr. Bernal’s Catalogue, from which the above description is an exact transcript, the assuming the seated figures to be, those of Raffaele and Fornarina, created an extraordinary competition to possess a pictorial production apparently so identified with this distinguished artist. The general impression seemed to be that the plate was painted by Raphael himself. But Raphael died in 1520, and the plate bears the impress of a much later date. It now forms no. 2981 of the Marlborough House “Inventory,” where it is thus unostentatiously described : PLATE. At the sale this was thought to be a jester's helmet. It is more probably one of the helmets used at the so-called mock tournaments which formed part of the pageantry of the lords of misrule. In the Meyrick collection, at Goodrich Court, is a set of spirited drawings, which commemorate an entertainment of this kind given at Nuremberg in 1446, of one of which drawings the accompanying illustration is a reduced copy. It will be perceived that the housings of one of the horses is covered with fools' caps and magpies. A good account of these mock or burlesque tournaments, written by Sir Samuel Meyrick, is given in Brayley's Graphic and Historical Illustrator, p. 353.

An interesting work of the time of Queen Elizabeth. Mentioned in Pennant's Tour—engraved beneath—4 $\frac{3}{4}$  in. diameter. (See illustration.)* 71*l.* British Museum.

This Scottish brooch is traditionally said to have been made by a tinker on the estate of Lockbuy in Mull, from silver ore found there in or about the year 1500. It was handed down by the ladies of the family of McLean, till Anna Campbell, the wife of Murdock McLean (who had no male issue), gave it to Isabella McLean, their daughter, wife of John Scrogie, Esq.

Pennant describes it in his Tour in Scotland, 1772, part ii. p. 14. It was then in Dr. Lort's possession, at the sale of whose effects, July 15, 1791, no. 60, it was purchased by Samuel Tysson. Mr. Bindley bought it at his sale May 18, 1802, no. 67, and Mr. Thomas bought it at Bindley's sale, March 5, 1819, no. 241*; and on the dispersion of that extraordinary cabinet of rarities, it came into Mr. Bernal's possession for ten guineas. See Catalogue, June 11, 1844, no. 32.

MONOGRAMS AND MARKS

FOUND ON

POTTERY AND PORCELAIN.

TAKEN FROM DRONGNIART'S "MUSÉE CERAMIQUE," OR FROM SPECIMENS IN THE POSSESSION OF THE EDITOR AND HIS FRIENDS.

THE earliest productions—Chinese, Egyptian, Oriental, Etruscan, Greek, Roman, Moorish (including Hispano-Mauro ware), Peruvian, Della Robbia, and many other kinds—are generally without marks. The age and country of such can only be determined by a practised eye. And so, too, is much of the modern pottery and porcelain—German, French, Italian (including Capo da Monti) and English. But even marks are not always to be relied on, as they are sometimes forged, especially those of Sèvres and Chelsea. When the mark is covered by the glaze instead of being merely pencilled on after the piece was made, there is some little guide; but as this can be imitated, and some genuine pieces have the factory marks put on over the glaze, there is no invariable rule. Besides which, certain manufactories, both in this country and abroad, counterfeit entire pieces very successfully.

Pottery.—Italy.—Della Robbia Ware.

LUCA DELLA ROBBIA is fully entitled to stand at the head of this section, although no marks exist by which his works can be identified. He was born in 1388, and died about 1430, in his 42nd year. His works—chiefly figures and bas-reliefs—are just what would be expected from an Italian sculptor, who worked in enamelled Terra-cotta (called also terra invetriata or vitrified earth) for churches. His earlier pieces seem to have been entirely white, some of them unglazed; his later ones, white figures on vivid blue grounds, sometimes decorated with blue, green, golden, or orange tints. He was succeeded by his brothers and descendants, who carried on the manufacture for nearly a century and a half. Their works have in later times been frequently and well imitated in Florence and Deccia.

Italy.—Majolica.

HISPANO-MAURO WARE. It seems necessary to notice this before proceeding to the recognized Italian Majolica. Some of this Spanish-Arab ware is apparently of early date, and may have been the parent of those dishes and vessels of Moresque pattern which seem to have been made in Italy late in the fifteenth and throughout the sixteenth century. They are generally of a coppery or rusty brown colour and highly lustrous, as if gilt or bronzed, (whence they are sometimes called metallic pottery,) and the decorations are quite Alhambraic, seldom introducing more than one subject—a doe, a lion, or an Arabic monogram—in the centre or on the back. They are by no means uncommon, and range in price below the finer descriptions of Majolica. Specimens may be seen at Marlborough House, and in the British Museum. Mr. Bernal had several, see No. 1900, &c.

There are plates enamelled on metal of the same Moorish character, called in Bernal's Catalogue, MORESCO-HISPANO. See Nos. 1581, 1582.

I P.

PESARO.

Supposed to mean In Pesaro, or to be the Monogram of Maestro Jeronimo Pesaro, from 1520 to 1550. Pesaro ware is of a somewhat distinct character, often deep blue or purple and white, with orange borders of flowers. It is sometimes marked with these letters, but at Cluny is a plate marked with only a P. The specimens in Mr. Bernal's collection were very artistic, and highly finished. See Nos. 1849 and 2070, both dated 1520; also a plate dated 1535, marked "fato in Pesaro." Bernal, No. 2042. Reduced size.

PESARO?

On a plate—Arabesques on a blue ground—described in Brongniart. Probably of late date. Passeri mentions a dish, dated 1582, marked O A, united by a cross; and Labarte had one marked Pesaro, 1771.

GUBBIO.

Giorgio Andreoli? possibly an early mark, soon after he came from Pavia to Gubbio in 1498, and some years before he was ennobled and called Maestro Giorgio. On a richly lusted Gubbio plate, belonging to Mr. Isaac Falcke, and now in the Ceramic Court of the Crystal Palace.

GUBBIO. Giorgio Andreoli, (Maestro Giorgio), probably before he was ennobled, or possibly a compound monogram of Giorgio Andreoli and Oratio Fontana. On the back of an extremely well painted plaque, representing St. Jerome in a rocky landscape, slightly iridescent. No. 119 of the Soulages Collection. Reduced size. It may be noted here, that much of the Gubbio ware, including both the early and later works of Maestro Giorgio, is without marks.

GUBBIO. Maestro Giorgio. From a plate at Marlborough House representing St. Francis receiving the Stigmata. The dated specimens of this artist are mostly between 1518 and 1541. One of his finest compositions, an altarpiece, consisting of many hundred figures, was executed as early as 1518, for a church at Gubbio, and is now in the Museum at Frankfort. The finest specimen, at any rate the most costly yet sold by auction, was a highly lustrous plate, dated 1525, decorated with a painting of THE THREE GRACES, after Marc Antonio, which was lately bought for Mr. Fountaine, at Mr. Roussel's sale, at Paris, for four hundred guineas.

GUBBIO. Maestro Giorgio. From a plate with gold and ruby lustre. No. 15 of the Soulages Collection. Reduced size. The same mark, dated 1528, is on a fine plate belonging to Mr. Isaac Falcke, now in the Ceramic Court of the Crystal Palace. See also Bernal, No. 1739, dated 1524.

GUBBIO. Maestro Giorgio. (Both this and the preceding are, according to Mr. Robinson, probably executed by his son, Maestro Cencio, or Vincentio.) From plate No. 38 in the Soulages Collection. Reduced size. See a plate dated 1534 in Bernal, No. 1978. See also Brongniart for mention of a plate of Giorgio, dated as early as 1485.

GUBBIO. Maestro Giorgio. One of the finest specimens in the Bernal Collection was No. 1926, described as the Judgment of Paris, and dated 1525. This is now in the possession of A. Fontaine, Esq.

GUBBIO. Maestro Giorgio, another mark, undated. From Passeri.

GUBBIO. Maestro Giorgio. From a small Tazza, dated 1525. No. 58 of the Soulages Collection. Reduced size. See also Bernal, No. 1950, for a specimen of the same date.

GUBBIO. Another mark of Maestro Giorgio, on a plate painted with "Baalam prophesying." It is interesting as being the type of some of the upright monograms, consisting of circles and crosses, found on medicine jars, and which are generally supposed to indicate the proprietor rather than the artist, or to be a compound of both.

GUBBIO. Dated 1519, and attributed by Passeri to Maestro Giorgio, but not unlikely to Maestro Cencio. On a dish decorated with arabesques on a pale blue ground, with metallic lustre, but less vigorously painted than usual.

GUBBIO. Supposed to be Maestro Cencio, i. e. Vincentio, or Vincenzo, son of Maestro Giorgio. On a dish in the possession of M. Souvageot, cited by Passeri.

GUBBIO. Signature not yet deciphered, found on a plate, much in the style of Maestro Giorgio and Xanto. From Passeri.

GUBBIO. This monogram occurs on a fine large early dish, with the arms of the Torregiani family in the centre, surrounded by a wreath of foliage and a deep border of trophies, the whole painted in metallic and ruby lustre on a rich blue ground. It was formerly the property of Mons. Galliardi, of Florence, who is said to have given £200 for it, but it was lately sold at Christie's for £104. The first letter is apparently a Greek Phi, the second an X or a cross, the third a D, which gives this mark some similarity to one of those ascribed to Oratio Fontana, of Urbino.

S.P.Q.R.

GUBBIO. These letters (which are not facsimiles) were on plates, dated 1512, 1520, 1525, and 1535. See Bernal, Nos. 1847, 1865, 1946, 1992, and 2061. I have seen the same mark on what seemed to be Neapolitan ware, of about 1550. The letters are the well-known S(enatus) P(opulisque) R(omanus) of the Roman Standard, and probably not an artist's mark.

GUBBIO. On a large dish dated 1546, subject, Coriolanus, elaborately and well painted, but not lustrous. The S.P.Q.R. occurs on a trophy in the foreground.

M.A.I.M.

Probably On a plate, circa 1500. Bernal,
GUBBIO. No. 1880.

A:D·B

Probably Circa 1500. Bernal, No. 1777.
 GUBBIO. The letters in this and the preceding are not facsimiles.

Maestro Prestino. GUBBIO. On a large deep dish with gold and ruby lustre, inscribed "fato in Gubbio per mano di maestro Prestino," 1557.
 Subject: Venus and Cupid. Now in the Crystal Palace, belonging to Mr.
 Isaac Falcke.

1531.
 f. X. A. R.
 Turbino.

URBINO. Francesco Xanto Aveli da Rovigo in Urbino. From a piece in the Collection at Marlborough House and Bernal, 2014. See plates dated 1532, Bernal, Nos. 1896 and 1976. The letter T which precedes the word Ur-bano is supposed to be a contraction of the word in.

F. X. A. R. P. URBINO.

Francesco Xanto Avelo Rovigense (Pinxit?). These letters were on a plate dated 1531, in the Bernal Collection, No. 1781, and the inscription in full was on another dated 1533.
 See Bernal, Nos. 1804 and 1938.

F<sup>co</sup>
 F: X:
 Rou:

URBINO. Francesco Xanto Rovigense. From a piece in the Collection at Marlborough House.

Sometimes the monogram is merely
 F. X., and sometimes only an X. See Bernal, No. 2028.

F. B. R.

URBINO. Francesco Xanto Rovigense. On a plate, marked N, 1535. No. 1816 of Bernal's Collection. The same three letters, but the R placed underneath, on a very fine and extremely valuable Xanto plate, with ruby and metallic lustre, dated 1533, now at Strawberry Hill.

F. X. Rovi.
 URBINO.

Francesco Xanto Rovigense. On a plate dated 1536. Bernal, No.
 1802. Mr. Bernal's best specimens were No. 2081, now in the British Museum, and 1938.

1539.

URBINO.

Monogram of Francesco Xanto da Rovigo. From a finely painted plate, in which the ruby and gold lustre is supposed to be added by Maestro Giorgio. Subject: the sword of Damocles. The property of the editor, and now at the Manchester Exhibition. Fac-simile of Monogram.

X.

URBINO.

From a Tazza, finely painted in Arabesque, dark blue and white, not dated. Fac-simile of the Monogram.

URBINO.

This mark, closely following the word Nota, occurs on a fine Tazza, painted with a mythological subject, and ascribed to Fra Xanto.

Y.

URBINO.

On a dish of blue ground, with a portrait of "Laura" in colours, coarsely painted. Some of the early deep plates, ascribed to Maestro Giorgio, have a portrait of Laura (probably Petrarch's Laura), finely executed.

A P.

URBINO.

Alfonzo Patanazzi, a late but indifferent artist. Sometimes his name is signed in full. At Marlborough House is one marked Alf. P. F. Urbino, 1606.

B. F. V. F.

URBINO.

Battista Franco (Urbino Fecit?) Painter to Guidobaldo II., Duke of Urbino, in 1540—1555. One of the most celebrated of the Majolica artists for classical and skilful drawing. He returned to Venice, and died there, 1561.

URBINO. Oratio Fontana Urbinate fecit, Painter to the Duke Guidobaldo, of Castel Durante (1540—1560), from Passeri, who, however, says he was unable to verify the monogram. Some of the finest known specimens of Majolica are painted by this artist. He usually signs his name either Orazio or Oratio Fontana.

URBINO. Oratio Fontana. On a plate described in the Appendix to the Soulagés Catalogue. Reduced size.

URBINO. Oratio Fontana. From a plate, No. 1927 of Bernal's Collection, now in the British Museum. Full size of Monogram. (The Editor has a small deep dish of this date, 1544, but without any monogram, which in richness of colour and quality of execution, has all the appearance of being by Oratio Fontana.)

URBINO? 1550? Supposed to be Oratio Fontana. On a magnificent Plateau, in the Museum of the Louvre. Reduced size.

URBINO. Supposed to be Oratio Fontana; assuming the Greek Phi to stand for O. f., and the Delta for Durantino. From a finely painted Tazza, in the possession of Andrew Fountaine, Esq. Reduced size.

URBINO. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.

CASTEL-DURANTE This mark has hitherto been attributed to Castel Durante, but Mr. Franks of the British Museum now attributes it to Deruta. On a dish, painted with a subject from Orlando Furioso, in the possession of Mrs. Palliser. On another at Marlborough House, the intersecting line is more like a long S reversed, and is dated 1539, with the letters G. S., indicating, it is supposed, Guido Selvaggio, a skilful artist, who afterwards went to Antwerp, and gave an Italian character to the Flemish pottery. Reduced size. In general the plates of this factory are inscribed in blue, "In Castel Durante." See Bernal, No. 1841, for a plate dated 1519, and No. 2017, for one dated 1526.

DERUTA.

On a dish painted in blue Camaieu, with metallic lustre, subject, "Diana at the Bath," now at the Hotel de Cluny. This, as well as the preceding mark, has hitherto been attributed to Castel Durante. Reversed it might read as a D.

Unknown.
Probably
URBINO or
GUBBIO.

School of Giorgio, but inferior. Mr. Robinson thinks the N may be the monogram of Maestro Giorgio's son Vincentio, and mean VIN, the first three letters of his name. On a Tazza; subject, Head of John the Baptist in a charger. No. 39 of the Soulages Collection. In Bernal, No. 1816, was a plate marked N, 1535, F. X. R., which seems to connect this N with Francesco Xanto.

It may be here observed, that much of the early Urbino ware is without marks, especially vessels and figures.

URBINO.

Nicolo da Urbino. On a plate well drawn and painted, subject "Parnassus," after Raphael, in the possession of Mons. Souvaget. From Passeri.

URBINO. On another similar plate, subject, Diana and Actæon. From Passeri. This monogram, without the crown, is similar to those of Lucas Cranach and Lucas Cambiasi, the latter a painter in Camaiou at Genoa.

URBINO. On a ewer, blue ground, with yellow scrolls, of remarkably fine execution, in the possession of M. de Rothschild.

FAENZA. The mark (which is here considerably reduced) was on a plate, No. 1808, of Bernal, described as circa 1500, of fine and rare character, bought by the British Museum for £43 ls.

FAENZA. On a plaque of magnificent execution, after a painting of the school of Albert Durer. From Passeri.

FAENZA. On a Faenza plate, blue ground, with boys and animals tinted yellow. Faenza ware is generally dark blue or orange for the ground colour, and yellow or orange for the subject or centre; and one of its characteristics is arabesque borders and the invariable absence of the metallic lustre. From the brilliancy of the colours and glaze, it has more the appearance of porcelain than pottery.

FAENZA. The letter F, whether written or printed, probably indicates Faenza. It is sometimes of very quaint form.

FAENZA. This kind of F occurs on what appears to be a Faenza plate. It is similar to the F of the Rouen Faience.

FAENZA. Mark on the back of a beautifully-painted plate, with broad arabesque border of indigo blue and bianchetti, and a female portrait of Laura (apparently Petrarch's) in the centre. The British Museum has specimens dated 1525 and 1527, but the present (in the possession of the editor) seems later. Nothing can be more perfect than the drawing and shading. A similar mark sometimes occurs, very freely flourished and crossed.

FAENZA. P. Incha Agricola. This monogram was on Mr. Bernal's Nos. 1832, 1833, and 1845, three medicine jars, dated 1501 and 1502; and on No. 1949, a plate which sold for £90, the name was given in full.

FAENZA. Mr. Marryat has a Faenza plate, subject, Samson pulling down the pillars of the Temple, with this monogram, which is not unlikely to be that of F. Atanasius.

FAENZA. Another mark. On a dish repoussé at the back, forming festoons of different colours, and ornamented with arabesques.

Unknown. Considerably reduced. From Marryat, who obtained the mark from Mr. Bernal. But the plate was not in his collection.

Unknown. On a bowl, with arabesques in relief. Brongniart.

Unknown.

On a cup with festooned border.
Brongniart.

Unknown.

On a Tazza, dated 1548. Brongniart, page 183, No. 195.

CAFFAGIOLO?

This mark was on the famous Raphael and Fornarina plate of the Bernal Collection, figured and described at our page 195. Mr. Robinson, of Marlborough House, attributes it to Caffagiolo, a castle of the Medici, near Florence, where he presumes most of the pieces bearing evidences of the Medici family to have been made. He thinks that the "red enamel colour" belongs almost exclusively to this fabrique and Faenza. See Soulages, p. 35. Mr. Fountaine has a plate of this ware marked with a Trident (like the Swansea mark), and a very small ring by the side of it. Some plates are said to be marked Caffagiolo, some merely with a C, and others with a large P, generally in blue.

No known MONTE-LUPO.
Mark.

This ware, which seems to belong to about 1530—80, has a very Neapolitan character, but is somewhat bolder in its colours and drawing, and revels in vivid blues and decided colours. Some handsome medicine jars, painted in scrolls, and large blue and black dishes, with a kind of damascene under the glaze, are ascribed to this factory. See Bernal, No. 1830.

The black and white mottled ware modelled in vessels of classic design, is also attributed to this factory.

ABRUZZI.

A crown appears to be one of the marks of the many potteries of the Abruzzi, of which we know very little. From Passeri.

SAVONA.
(or Naples)

Arms of Savona. See Brongniart, page 183, Nos. 202 and 203. This mark, but more triangular, occurred on a blue dish—subject, "Curtius leaping into the gulph," lately sold at Christie's as Neapolitan. B.

SAVONA
(or Naples).

Mark, generally blue, on vases of Majolica character. Brongniart, page 185, No. 224. The same mark, with a double Y, was on a jug, No. 1846, of the Bernal Collection.

Ditto.

Blue figures on a silver white ground. These two marks are similar excepting the letters, which are, no doubt, initials of the artist.

NAPLES.

On a pair of shaped medicine or pharmaceutical jars, dated 1524, painted in scrolls, chiefly blue, and highly glazed. On another jar the same mark assumed more the figure of an L crossed at top. Valued at £10. Such jars are also called apothecaries' pots, drug vases, &c., but it will be convenient here to call them by one accepted name, "Medicine Jars."

NAPLES.

Mark on a medicine jar, described as Neapolitan, date about 1540. It would be easy to give many more of the curious monograms from medicine and pharmaceutical jars and bottles, but want of space forbids; nor is it quite certain that they are artists' or factors' marks.

NAPLES.

This P is found on medicine jars and vessels described as Neapolitan; date about 1560—80. The letter P is also said to be found on some of the manufacture of PERUGIA, where much Majolica of ordinary character seems to have been made.

NAPLES.

On a circular plateau, with figures in the manner of Majolica, in the Sèvres Collection. Brongniart.

 NAPLES. On Dessert plates of Majolica patterns. Brongniart.
 NAPLES. On Dessert plates, ditto. B. This and the two preceding marks are now, in the opinion of the present director at Sèvres, thought to be "Delft."
 NAPLES. F. Del Vecchio. Stamped on pieces of table service and white ornaments, painted, or gilt; also on pieces painted in black on a red ground, in the Etruscan style. Brongniart, plate xliii. figs. 10 and 18.
 NAPLES. Giustiniani. Vases of all styles in white or coloured paste, chiefly Etruscan patterns. Brongniart, plate xliii. figs. 2, 3, 16. These manufacturers generally stamp their name in full. When they use only an initial letter, it is usually engraved.
 NAPLES. Giustiniani, 1780. Indented letter, on a white enamelled dish, of shell pattern.
 NAPLES. The I. N. means In Napoli. Indented and scarcely legible, 1800, on vessels of Etruscan pattern; white, black, and reddish brown.
 NAPLES. The brothers Giustiniani. These letters occur on part of the service from which the name in full was taken.
 VICENZA. Stamped on a Dessert-plate.
 FLORENCE. Fi means Firenze. On a soup tureen, shaped like a cabbage, with a snail for the knob. From Brongniart, who does not suggest the date, which is probably before 1600.

FLORENCE. On a piece in the Musée Ceramique.
In blue.

VENICE. 1650—1700? On round and oval dishes, of blueish white paste, with landscapes painted blue, brown, and yellow, with arabesque borders in relief. Brongniart. Much fine pottery of Majolica character appears to have been made at Venice in the seventeenth century.

Ven.<sup>a</sup>

VENICE. Sometimes found on old Venetian pottery, in red. And it should seem also on porcelain. See Bernal, No. 406, for a teapot, now in the possession of Mr. Isaac Falcke.

Spain, Portugal, &c.

PIEDMONT. Vineuf (in Piedmont), D. Gioanetti, director; established 1750.

MADRID. This interlaced C is sometimes without the crown, both on the Madrid pottery and on porcelain. See BUEN-RETIRO, at page 469.

LISBON. This mark is found on pottery made in the suburbs of Lisbon. On a scent vase. Brongniart.

M. P.

PORTO (or Oporto). Manufacture of Rocha Soares. On a tea-cup. Sometimes the mark is MIRA-VIA, PORTO; one word above, and the other below a crown.

MALTA. On two triangular stone jars, stamped.

France.

Faïence de Henri et Diane. This exquisitely wrought early French ware ranges about 1520—1553, and is extremely rare. It is fine hard pottery, generally in Italian taste, and supposed to be the work of GIROLAMO DELLA ROBBIA, nephew of the celebrated Luca della Robbia. Shaw, in his "Decorations of the Middle Ages," figures and describes two fine examples, one a ewer belonging to H. Magniac, Esq.; the other, a candlestick belonging to Sir A. Rothschild, Bart., which cost him more than £200, and is now at the Manchester Exhibition. Mr. Bernal had but few specimens of early French ware. See Nos. 1982 to 1986, 2103, 2104, 2111.

BERNARD PALISSY.

Engraved with a point. On a small figure called the nurse of Francis I. Brougniart, plate xxxv. fig. 5. But Palissy is almost always without any perceptible mark, though sometimes the pieces with grotesque masks and scalloped borders have a daisy, which in French is Marguerite, as a principal ornament, and probably as a mark in honour of Marguerite de Navarre. The ware of this celebrated artist is generally in relief or raised work, of various colours, and the ornaments usually Fish, Frogs, Lizards, Shells and Insects, but sometimes figures and faces. He died 1589. Mr. Bernal's best specimen was No. 2076. Much of the coarse raw-coloured ware often sold as Palissy, is probably of much later date.

SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

On an enamelled tile for mosaic pavement (about 1552). Brougniart, plate xxxiii. fig. 13.

NEVERS. On a large round dish, painted in blue, Chinese pattern, circa 1600. This ware (often called French Majolica) was first manufactured about 1565, under the superintendence of Italian artists, and declined about 1600. In the Bernal Catalogue, No. 479, will be found a fine specimen of the early period; and at No. 1939, of the late period; and at No. 1981, a pair of bottles. The present mark is from a dish about 1600.

NEVERS. On a blue and white enamelled pitcher in the form of a ring (at Sèvres). Brongniart, plate xxxvi. fig. 2. The monogram is that of Jacques Senlis, a celebrated potter of the 18th century, and in this instance is introduced in the decoration.

NEVERS. On a Comptoir, marked blue and orange. Brongniart, plate xxxvi. fig. 1. Much of the beautiful Fayence of Nevers is without marks. Blue and orange are favourite colours.

ROUEN. Royal manufacture of Louis XIV. On an octagon Seau, with handles. The letters which often accompany the fleur-de-lis are probably the monogram of the painter. Brongniart, plate xxxvi. fig. 7.

ROUEN. This mark is on a large soup tureen (of a fine delft character), in the form of a Turkey, belonging to the editor, and now at the Manchester Exhibition. It is possibly one of the service made for Louis XIV., in 1714, when he sent his silver plate to the mint to defray the expenses of the war.

ROUEN. On an oblong dish with two handles, and on various pieces of a table service. The S oftener occurs without the D.

ROUEN. On a Seau.

ROUEN. On a plate with festooned border.

ROUEN.

On a mustard pot with arms of the Duc de Penthièvre. Brongniart gives it as Rouen, but it is more like the PH of Philip Hanung of Frankenthal.

ROUEN.

On an octagon plateau with feet.

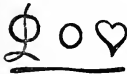

ROUEN.

On Faience, painted in dull colours, red, blue, green, and yellow.

ROUEN.

On three oblong blue dishes (of one service), each bearing an escutcheon surmounted by a count's coronet with the letters L O interlaced; manufacture of the 17th and 18th centuries.

ROUEN.

The different marks may be thus explained:—The letter L crossed by a small o represents the mark of the manufacture. The letters or marks which precede or follow it, are those of the artists who painted the escutcheons.

ROUEN.

UZES GARD. Francois Pichou. Brongniart.

SCEAUX-PENTHIÈVRE.

The word Sceaux is usually underneath the anchor. Plates in relief, the centres painted with sea pieces, &c. We also find this mark on the blue enamelled pottery of Cologne.

CASEMENE. The mark of a manufactory near Besançon. Stamped.

VAL-SOUS-MEUDON. Mettenhoff and Mourot. Stamped on plates, &c.

NISMES. Plantier, Boncoirant & Co. Stamped on plates, &c.

BOURDEAUX. Lahens and Rateau. Established in 1829, but lasted a very short time. Re-established by M. D. Johnston, who marked his ware with the name of the town in full.

LE MONTET. A manufactory near Charolles, under the direction of Mons. Laurjorois. On white enamelled stone-ware. Stamped.

VOISINLIEN. A manufactory near Beauvais, conducted by John Ziegler (historical painter). Generally brown stone-ware, in relief. Stamped. Brongniart, plate xlvi. figs. 1.—10.

QUIMPER.

De la Hubandière, 1809. On glazed stone-ware, grey and brown. Stamped.

SAINT SAMSON. Manufactory on the Oise. Crucibles, in whitish paste.

MONTPELIER. Le Vouland. On stone-ware.

MEISSEN,

DRESDEN.

Boettcher ware, 1700—1710. Fine soft pottery, generally reddish, and formerly called the "Red porcelain of Dresden." Stamped. Brongniart, plate xlv. fig. 3. Some fine specimens were in the Bernal Collection, Nos. 26 to 32. The present mark is from Brongniart.

Frankenthal Porcelain works. See page prefixes for No.

larger. The French call this ware
Poterie du Rhin.

celain of Höchst, after 1740, when the pottery appears to have been relin-

NURENBERG.

This town claims the introduction of Majolica into Germany in 1503, by means of Hirschvogel, who studied at Urbino. But the ware is of a different character, generally in high relief, like sculpture, and wrought with considerable minuteness. Palissy is supposed by some to have originally adopted this, and not Italian ware as his model. It continued to be made here in great perfection to a late period.

COLOGNE.

Manufacture of M. L. Cremer. On plates, cups, &c. Engraved.

The early Cologne, Grès de Flandres, and German ware (which have some general similarity of character), are rarely distinguished by any monogram, although often dated. They are well illustrated in the present Catalogue. See Nos. 3357 to 3370.

POPPELSDORF. A manufactory on the Rhine, near Bonn, conducted by M. L. Wessel. Stamped. The same mark is sometimes found on the manufacture of Mettlach, who generally prints his name in full. Brongniart, plate xliii. fig. 17. In Bernal, No. 375, is a porcelain cup and saucer of this factory.

DELFT.

On a large plate with festooned border. In the centre a landscape after Berghem, finely painted.

DELFT.

This Monogram appears to be A.P.K. interlaced, which on different specimens is more or less perfectly formed, according to the hand of the artist. Brongniart gives six varieties of it, and figures a blue water-jug, a tea-pot, and an armorial plate, all bearing it. The present is in red, from a plate of Chinese pattern, painted in red and gold. It may be observed here, that some of the early Delft ware has so much the character and fine colour of the old Japan, as scarcely to be distinguishable.

The city of Delft manufactured pottery as early as 1310, and exported it to England, from the time of our Henry IV. up to a late period (especially during the seventeenth century), in large quantities. There were at one time as many as thirty-eight factories, all probably having different marks, which it would now be almost impossible to identify.

England.

WEDGWOOD. STAFFORDSHIRE. English Pottery first began to assume BURSLEM, 1759—1770. the characteristics of high art under ETRURIA, 1770—1795. Josiah Wedgwood. After some previous success, he, in 1763, produced his fine cream-coloured or Queen's ware, then his jasper ware, and about 1769 his black Egyptian. His partner, Bentley, descendant of the celebrated scholar, Richard Bentley, directed the classical subjects till his death, in 1780; after which, up to 1786, Flaxman, who had been previously employed, designed or suggested all his principal works. Beautiful clear colour, generally a pale blue (called jasper or onyx), but often green, pink, violet, and other tints, and especially black (called basalt), without glaze, is one of its merits. This ware, after 1765, is generally stamped with the name in full of Wedgwood, and between 1768 and 1780 it bears the names of Wedgwood and Bentley. When engraved, instead of stamped, it may be suspected as imitation. A descriptive catalogue of his various productions, published 1777, may be seen in the British Museum. Pieces in the Wedgwood style, without any name, are generally by Turner, Adams, or some other of his many English imitators. He has even been imitated abroad, especially at Sèvres, Dresden, and Vienna. After the decease of Wedgwood in 1795, his successors devoted their attention for many years to the finer kinds of the usual glazed Staffordshire ware for the continental markets, especially Russia, and these also are marked Wedgwood. Of late they have resumed their old style of blue and white ware, and judging by its general bluntness, some of the old moulds are probably used.

TURNER (Jno.) STAFFORDSHIRE. This ware is generally stamped with his name. It is an imitation of Wedgwood; and, though generally inferior, some specimens are very nearly equal. Turner also made a beautiful white stone ware from a fine clay discovered in 1780, at Green Dock. He was on friendly terms with Wedgwood, and died at an advanced age in 1786. His sons continued the pottery, and made fine jasper and black ware till 1803, when they failed, in consequence of losses occasioned by the French Revolution.

ADAMS (Wm.) STAFFORDSHIRE. Another imitation of Wedgwood, usually without any name, though sometimes marked. It is scarcely inferior to Turner's, and some pieces are quite equal; but, being much more common, does not command so high a price.

TUNSTALL,
after 1789
called GREENGATES.

Imitations of Wedgwood are also found with the names, no doubt assumed, of EASTWOOD, WESTWOOD, and SACKWOOD; also of NAST, of Paris, but such ware has very little value.

STAFFORDSHIRE.
LONGPORT.

Davenport's ironstone Potteries were established in 1793 at Longport, and are still carried on there. It is curious that this is the only English pottery given in Brongniart's list, where it is placed at the head. The mark, previous to its use on this so-called iron-stone pottery (first made in 1805), is merely the anchor and name, stamped, without colour.

SWANSEA and NANTGARW.

Nantgarw has its name painted in red, and stamped in full. The Swansea Pottery, established about 1750, united with it in 1817, and the ware was afterwards marked Swansea with the addition of a trident. Sometimes Bevington, the manager's name, is added. In 1802, it became the property of the late Mr. Dillwyn, the naturalist, who occasionally made pretty specimens for gifts to his friends. In 1814 he attempted porcelain, which was elegantly and very correctly ornamented with flowers, insects, &c., but he discontinued porcelain in 1817, and resumed pottery.

CG

LEEDS.

DITTO.

Charles Green, 1770, &c. A book of patterns was published by this Pottery in 1770, of which a copy is in the British Museum; and Hartley, Green and Co. issued others in 1783, 1784, and 1786. The ware is of a dingy cream colour, much of it with open work, and marked CG, or with an arrow head. The Pottery is now carried on by Messrs. Warburton and Britton, who employ no fewer than four hundred hands.

Of the other early English Potteries—FULHAM, supposed to be the manufactory of sack-bottles, about 1640; LAMBETH, of stone ware, between 1640 and 1680; CAUGHLEY, in Shropshire, 1634, and perhaps earlier; BRADWELL, in Staffordshire, of red clay ware, by the brothers Elers, of Nuremberg, from 1700 to 1720; LIVERPOOL, first as early as 1653, and then printed ware in 1756, conducted by Mr. Carver; NOTTINGHAM, BRISTOL, LOWESTOFT, and a great number mentioned in “Shaw’s Chemistry of Pottery”—there are few or no known marks, and we have no space for any enquiry into their manufacture. There was a curious early embossed Dish, of a coarse Palissy character, bearing the arms of Westminster, dated 1659, and marked I.C.E., in Mr. Bernal’s sale (No. 2119), which some thought English, but others pronounced Flemish. There was another of very coarse ware (No. 2120), ornamented with a whole length of Charles II., dated 1668, which is most probably English. They are both in the British Museum; and there are many fine early specimens of supposed English ware in the Museum of Economic Geology. To enumerate the ENGLISH POTTERIES OF THE PRESENT DAY (more than one hundred and fifty) would be difficult, and not within the scope of the present volume. It is sufficient to say that they number many workmen of great skill and talent, capable of executing any works which depend on taste, manufacture, and chemical knowledge.

Porcelain Marks.—Germany.

DRESDEN. Royal manufacture, at MEISSEN, near Dresden. The Monogram AR (Augustus Rex) is that of Augustus I., king of Poland, used from 1709 to 1712. In blue.

DRESDEN. From 1712 to 1715, or probably to 1719, when the discoverer, Böttcher, died. On a cup and saucer, painted with Chinese figures. The mark is sometimes bolder. In blue.

DRESDEN. First used in 1720, under the direction of Höroldt. The mark is sometimes thicker. In blue.

DRESDEN. On an old tea-service, probably of Höroldt's period. The sword handles, by sometimes touching, seem to form a cartouche.

DRESDEN. The two electoral swords. Brongniart says this mark, in blue, was first used about 1730, and is still continued. This semicircular form is merely a variation of the following.

DRESDEN. The usual mark (in blue), subject only to the variations of artists or directors. Sometimes a dot is introduced between or below the handles, which indicates the immediate directorship of the king (Fred. Augustus III). The Marcolini period has a star beneath it. (See next page.)

DRESDEN. From a remarkably fine cup and cover, painted in Watteau subjects on a white ground. The dot between the handles indicates the Royal period. See also Bernal, Nos. 56, 57, 89, 91, 517.

DRESDEN. About 1778. During the directorship of the king. In blue.

The royal pieces are distinguished by the letters K. P. M. (Königliche Porcellan Manufactur), generally small and in gold.

Mr. Joseph mentions a piece in which the following inscription (but in German) occurs beneath the swords reversed. C. F. Kühnel, 35 years in service, 57 years old, 1776.

DRESDEN. Marcolini period, 1796. &c. The mark is often much smaller, and generally has a second star beneath it, which denotes the artist. The paste is sometimes covered with colour, especially deep blue, and many of the designs are from the pencil of Angelica Kaufmann, whose ideal painting was worshipped in Germany. See Bernal, No. 65.

K. P. P. C.

DRESDEN. Mr. Marryat has these letters on a Dresden service of the first period, supposed to have belonged to Count Brühl. K. P. M., as stated above, is the mark of the royal pieces, and the P. C. here may be a flourishing German M, partly obliterated. If the porcelain had been Berlin instead of Dresden, the letters might have stood for Königliche Preussische Porcellan Companie, or Comtoir.

VIENNA.

Imperial manufactory. Stamped in blue. Early mark, but not used till after 1744. The Porcelain made between 1720 and 1744 is without any mark. Brongniart, plate LII. fig. 1.

VIENNA.

The same, of a later period, taken from a richly gilt plate of exquisite workmanship, in the possession of the editor. Vienna porcelain is sometimes dated thus: 96 for 1796, 804 for 1804.

BERLIN. The mark of Wegeley, who established the first Porcelain manufactory at Berlin in 1751, and relinquished it in 1761; but the mark was for some time continued by his successor, Gottskowski. The W is generally more crossed, so as to look something like the Dresden mark.

BERLIN. Royal manufactory. This mark is taken from a very fine cup and saucer, painted with views of Berlin, Potsdam, &c., presented by the King of Prussia to the Duke of York.

BERLIN. This mark, in blue, has been adopted from the beginning, says Brongniart. See his plate LI. figs. 3, 10, 14. On the gilt Porcelain an eagle was generally added.

BERLIN. A special mark (in brownish red) first used about 1830, on small richly decorated pieces. K. P. M. means Königlische Porcellan Manufaktur.

HÖCHST,
in NASSAU. Hard paste. Arms of the Archbishopric of Mayence. See also page 455. Manufactory established about 1740, by Gelz, in conjunction with Ringler, who had left the manufactory of Vienna. It ceased in 1794. Mark in gold, red or blue. Sometimes the mark is a wheel with eight spokes. The pieces modelled by Melchior, and marked M, are highly esteemed. See Bernal, No. 371.

HÖCHST. Another mark. See also the Höchst marks under Pottery, page 455.

STRASBURG and FRANKENTHAL. Mark of Philip Hanung, used at Strasburg, and at Hagenau on the Rhine.

STRASBURG and
FRANKENTHAL.

Philip Hanung; another mark.

FRANKENTHAL.

Crest of the Palatinate. Soft paste. First period, 1755 to 1761, conducted by Philip Hanung, under the direction of Ringler, who had left Höchst. See Bernal, No. 368. On a plate, painted in flowers, marked in blue.

FRANKENTHAL.

Mark of Joseph Adam Hanung, which is sometimes found in conjunction with the lion. Supposed to be Frankenthal.

FRANKENTHAL.

Second period, 1762-1798, under the patronage of Carl Theodor, Elector Palatine, afterwards Duke of Bavaria. Hard paste, stamped in blue. See Bernal, Nos. 76, 369, 379.

FRANKENTHAL.

On two small baskets of open-work pattern, with small May flowers.

FRANKENTHAL.

Arms of Bavaria. The mark of the third period, 1798, when the Palatinate was annexed to Bavaria. On the death of Carl Theodore, in 1799, the factory was removed to Nymphenburg, and the mark continued there.

NYPHENBURG, near Munich.

Royal manufacture. The arms of Bavaria. Stamped without colour. Brongniart, plate LII, figs. 4 and 7. See Bernal, Nos. 380, 397-99.

NYMPHENBURG.

Royal manufacture. Hard paste. Probably the earliest mark. On an ancient tea-pot. In blue.

FÜRSTENBERG.

Ducal manufacture, founded 1750. Hard paste. Scarcely equal to Dresden, although some specimens are occasionally very fine. See Bernal, No. 400. Blue mark.

FÜRSTENBERG.

On a pipe bowl of soft paste.

LUDWIGSBURG,
usually called
KRONENBURG.

First period. Established by Ringler, under the patronage of Carl Eugene, 1758. It was sometimes merely the double C without the crown. See Bernal, No. 372.

LUDWIGSBURG,
usually called
KRONENBURG.

Another mark, probably of the first period. Hard paste.

LUDWIGSBURG,
usually called
KRONENBURG.

Second period. Hard paste, marked in blue. The cypher of Carl Eugène, founder of the manufactory in 1758.

This factory was celebrated for the beauty of its modelling and painting, in which it was quite equal to Dresden.

DITTO.
A variation.

Another mark. Fac-similied from a beautiful service. This manufactory ceased in 1824.

FULDA
(Hesse-Cassel).

Established by Ringler's workmen in 1763. Ceased in 1780. Hard paste. The mark (blue) is a double F, meaning Fürstlich Fuldäisch. Sometimes it is without the crown and cross, and sometimes a + used without any other mark. The ware is well designed, fine, and scarce.

RUDOLSTADT (Schwarzburg).

Hard (native) paste, marked in blue. The first factory in Thuringia, established about 1758, and very considerable in 1795. The R sometimes has a small dt near the top.

GROSBREITENBACH. Hard paste. Greiner manufacturer. He used the same mark (a clover-leaf or trefoil), but generally less formal than the present, at his other manufactories, SELTZERODE, WALLENDORF, and LIMBACH.

RAUENSTEIN.

The principal manufactory in Saxe-Meiningen. Hard paste. Marked in blue.

RAUENSTEIN.

The same, a variation.

LIMBACH.

Another manufactory in Saxe-Meiningen, conducted by Greiner. Hard paste.

LIMBACH.

Another mark, sometimes the L is italic, and sometimes double.

CHARLOTTENBURG. Two miles from Berlin. Manufacture of Mons. Pressel, established 1790. Hard paste, called "Porcelaine de Santé." Monogram, stamped in colour up to 1830, afterwards without. The same mark is found on a white dish of soft Berlin Porcelain.

ALT-HALDENSLEBEN. Manufacture of Mons. Nathusius. Hard paste. Stamped in blue, somewhat rudely resembling the Berlin mark.

S.

SCHLAKENWALD, Hard paste, 1812. The mark sometimes engraved, sometimes pencilled in gold.

F&R

LE HAMMER,
near Carlsbad.

Hard paste. Stamped.

BADEN.

From 1753 to 1758 (and again later), carried on with workmen from Höchst. The mark is the blade of an axe, generally in gold, and is sometimes merely lines, that is, without any filling up.

G

GERA.

Generally white, prettily painted with blue or red flowers. The G is sometimes more elegant, and sometimes the word is marked in full.

G

GOTHA.

Founded in 1780 by Vienna workmen, and existing in 1840. Sometimes the name is at full length.

R

GOTHA.

Another mark attributed to Gotha, but very like that of Rudolstadt.

ANSPACH.

This A is sometimes more like that of Amsterdam; occasionally it is smaller, and placed above arms.

Korzec

POLAND.

Korzec and Wolhynie, Hard porcelain. Marked in red.

ELBOGEN,
in Bohemia.

Hard paste. The mark, an Elbow, is a pun upon the name of the town. Stamped, without colour.

COPENHAGEN.

Royal manufacture. Hard paste. Marked in blue. The three wavy lines indicate the sound and the two belts. They are sometimes closer and neater. See Bernal, Nos. 390, 401. Lord Nelson was partial to this porcelain, and when he was at Copenhagen, in 1801, sent some to Lady Hamilton.

ST. PETERSBURG. Imperial manufacture, time of Nicholas I. Hard paste. Another mark is three perpendicular lines, thus, III; another, something like an AP joined.

ST. PETERSBURG. Imperial manufacture. Marked in blue on decorated statuettes.

ST. PETERSBURG. A Russian E twice barred, for Ekathe'rina. The porcelain of the time of CATHERINE II. bears this monogram, and it is also found on portions of a very fine service made at Sèvres for the Empress in 1777.

SWITZERLAND.
NYON.

L. Genesse, manufacturer. Hard paste, marked in blue. The porcelain of the Canton de Vaud establishment is marked with a fish in single lines, without shading.

ZURICH.

Hard porcelain, blue. Under the direction of Trou, (Qy. from St. Cloud,) about 1755.

Holland, &c.

Amstel

A factory on the river Amstel, at Amsterdam. From a jug of elegant form, painted with garlands in the French style, about 1780. This factory was established by workmen from Dresden, and is celebrated for the fineness and beauty of its wares. It ceased about 1790. Amstel and Amsterdam are synonymous.

AMSTERDAM.

Hard paste. Saxon style. Marked in blue. See Bernal, Nos. 389, 404.

AMSTERDAM.

These letters are supposed to refer to the site of the manufactory. Marked in blue. Saxon style. The O is smaller than the other two letters, but not so small as Brongniart has made it.

Unknown,
but probably
AMSTEL.

Figured by Marryat first as unknown, and since as Veilsdorf. But by others supposed to be Amstel. Mr. Joseph gives a very similar mark, as found on a hard paste bowl painted in flowers and buds. It looks like a monogram of J. A. Hanung, of Frankenthal. See p. 466.

HAGUE.

Hard paste. Saxon style. Birds, flowers, &c. Generally pencilled in grey. See Bernal, Nos. 364, 365, 367.

TOURNAY.

Established 1750, and still continued. Soft paste. The mark for first quality is generally in gold; for second, blue. The annexed is taken from a small, but very fine specimen, a milk ewer and cover, ornamented with Bouchet figures in bistre. See Bernal, Nos. 391, 529, &c. A To, also a Ty, is supposed to be a Tournay mark.

LILLE.

Founded 1785, ceased 1792. A dolphin, crowned, in red, very indistinct. Hard paste. From a saucer in possession of Mr. Burn. Specimens are scarce.

BRUXELLES.

Hard paste. Marked in brown on a dark blue breakfast service, with flowers and silver lines. On a Brussels service, dated 1791, we find L. Crotté de Bruxelles, rue d' Arenberg, and on another, L Crotté à Brux.

England.

CHELSEA.

Fine soft paste. Venetians are said to have been the first workmen at Chelsea. An embossed oval enclosing an anchor without colour is supposed to be the earliest Chelsea mark. See a note at p. 37 of this Catalogue.

CHELSEA.

These two marks, one something like an arrow, the other like a quaver, were separately on a pair of early English butter-boats of a Chelsea character. The three characteristic dingy spots, marks of the stand on which this ware was baked, were at the bottom. These marks are claimed by some for Bow. See Bow and Worcester.

CHELSEA.

Other marks of the early period.

CHELSEA.

The earlier manufacture has the anchor engraved, without colour; the later has it painted in gold for first quality; and in red for second and inferior qualities.

CHELSEA.

Another variation, used till 1764, when the manufactory was transferred to Derby. It often happens, that only one or two pieces of a service or series are marked.

CHELSEA-DERBY.

Soft paste, transparent and fine. The Derby manufactory was established in 1751, but acquired no reputation till it obtained the Chelsea models and workmen in 1764. The anchor across indicates the union of Chelsea with Derby. Sometimes the anchor is larger, and almost encircled by the D.

DERBY.

Crown-Derby. This is posterior to the Chelsea-Derby, and not quite so fine. The marks of both are usually violet. The Dresden mark is often found on this manufacture.

WORCESTER.

Old Worcester. Soft paste, and, when of the best quality, quite equal to Derby. The mark is in blue under the glaze, and the pieces which bear it are generally painted in blue without gold. So says Brongniart; but the pieces with this mark are often gilt, and there is a fine specimen of this kind at the Manchester Exhibition. On a cup and saucer of the early blue and white Worcester, of Nankin pattern, the saucer has the crescent) and the cup a small b, like a quaver, which, therefore, is unquestionably an early Worcester mark. See Chelsea.

Ditto.

WORCESTER.

Second period of the old Worcester. This mark, sometimes with a slight variation, is either blue or red; and the pieces which bear it generally ornamented in the Chinese manner. Brongniart, plate liii. fig. 4. But one of the commonest series of marks on Chinese patterns is a set of bold figures from 1 to 9 fantastically crossed and recrossed with flourishes.

W

WORCESTER.

Another mark, supposed to be of the period of Dr Wall, who established the manufactory in 1751. The Editor has it on a portrait of the Chelsea Duke of Cumberland in soft pottery with a very high glaze, apparently Salopian.

Flight, Barr & Barr.

Mr. Thomas Flight purchased the Worcester manufactory in 1783, and transferred it to the firm, who generally marked their productions in full, but sometimes only with F. B. & B. They are for the most part beautifully and tastefully painted, and were at the time very expensive.

WORCESTER.

Kerr and Binns, the present spirited proprietors of the Worcester Works. This mark is on a cup and saucer of extreme lightness, elegance, and beauty, the specimen of a service made for her Majesty.

SALOPIAN.

Established by Thomas Turner, at Caughley, near Broseley, 1772. The printed Willow pattern, the most universal of all patterns, was first produced here about 1780. This mark is sometimes larger, but Salopian is rarely marked at all.

Or S

J.

SALOPIAN.

Soft paste, about 1789. Sometimes it was sent to be painted and gilt to Worcester, which gives it the latter character. The mark generally pencilled in blue.

DB

COALBROOKDALE.

This is the mark occasionally used by Messrs. Rose, of Coalport and Coalbrookdale, successors of Mr. Turner, who have a very extensive manufactory, where some of the closest imitations of Sèvres, Dresden, and Chelsea are constantly produced.

PLYMOUTH.

Hard paste, the first made in this country, generally blue and white. These porcelain works were established about 1760, by Cookworthy, but it was not till 1768 that he took out a patent for manufacturing from the now well-known "china-clay." The works ceased in 1772. Specimens are very scarce.

Lord Camelford was a partner, and Henry Bone (the elder) was for a time employed in the works, and painted some of the ware.

BRISTOL.

Founded in 1772, by purchase, from Cookworthy of Plymouth. Relinquished, and passed to Staffordshire in 1777. Hard paste.

These two marks (in light blue under the glaze) are given by Mr. Joseph as found on Bristol porcelain, painted in blue landscapes, with embossed birds and flowers. A simple cross + is another mark. Brongniart says that soft paste was made at Bristol about 1776 by Champion, the proprietor of this factory. What is generally known as Bristol ware are hard paste white figures, which are identified as English by their costume. Specimens are rare.

SWANSEA.

This mark, a trident, is stamped in red under "Swansea," both in pottery and porcelain (on the latter only between 1814 and 1817). See Pottery, page 461.

NANTGARW.

The name stamped in red, sometimes with the letters C G. A small factory commenced in 1813, by some workmen who absconded from Worcester. It existed for only a short time, and then merged into the Swansea establishment. Some of the porcelain specimens in the Geological Museum are extremely pretty, and worthy of Worcester.

Unknown.
but probably
WORCESTER.

On early blue and white porcelain.

WORCESTER.
(or DERBY?)

Mr. Marryat gives this mark as found on English china—creamy white, light and porous, and the gold well laid on. Mr. Joseph gives it reversed, making the 6 a 9, as found on a piece of Derby, in imitation of Chelsea, ornamented with green subjects. It has since been pronounced Old Worcester, which is the most likely. It is a palpable imitation of the Dresden mark.

Bow.

This manufactory is supposed to be coeval with that of Chelsea, and the paste is in general quite as white and soft. A bee, embossed or painted on some prominent part of a teapot or a jug, is supposed to have been one of the devices used; but the only mark about which there is no doubt is a triangle. Sometimes the triangle, by being repeated four times, makes a square. The editor has a teapot so marked, with stand and cover, embossed with tulip leaves in colours, and painted with insects, which he has no doubt is Bow.

Much unmarked ware of early English manufacture, quite as good, and sometimes better than the first Chelsea, is believed to be Bow. The butter boats described under Chelsea, are by some thought to be Bow, and by others early Worcester.

Spain, Portugal, Italy, &c.

BUEN RETIRO, near Madrid.

Soft paste. Royal manufacture. The best quality has the fleur-de-lis stencilled in blue; all other is stamped without colour. The two C's interlaced, and generally engraved, are the monogram of Charles III., founder of the manufacture. They indicate the period (1759) when the Capo di Monte establishment was discontinued, and the workmen, models, and tools taken to Spain. Charles III. died 1787. Most of the ware is in relief, like the Capo di Monte, but some is similar to Sèvres. See Capo di Monte, next page. Mr. Joseph figures the second mark, that is the fleur de lis, in conjunction with the letters O.F.L. as occurring on a cup, of which the saucer was marked with two swords crossed in the Dresden manner, with L on one side, and the fleur de lis on the other.

VISTA ALEGRE, near OPORTO.

Hard paste. Manufacture of M. Pinta-Basto. Mark in gold or colour.

VENICE.

Soft paste. Pencilled in red. This manufacture, the parent of our Chelsea, ceased in 1812.

VENICE.

Facsimile of the mark on a remarkably fine plate, painted in flowers in the Chelsea manner, probably of the period. Now at the Manchester Exhibition.

VENICE.

This mark, in red (apparently two flails crossed), is given by Mr. Joseph as found on a hard paste cup and saucer with portraits, made at Venice.

LENOVE, near Bassano.

Ceased in 1812. Soft paste, the mark, an asterisk of six points, generally sharper than the engraving, is pencilled in blue or red. A similar mark, four times as large, is sometimes found on Gubbio ware.

VINEUF, called
TURIN.

Hard paste. Under the direction of D. Gioanetti. The  $\dagger$  stands for the arms of Savoy. This mark also occurs without the D G, and sometimes it is merely a cross. The earliest mark is said to be a W. Pencilled in blue.

TURIN.

Another mark of the Gioanetti period.

DOCCIA,
near Florence.

Hard and soft paste. Two triangles crossed, forming a star of six rays (in gold on the richest specimens), a quartering of the arms of the Marquis Ginori (founder of the manufacture), which bore azure on the gold belt, charged with three stars azure. Sometimes Ginori impressed.

Ditto.

On a cup and saucer, very tastefully painted with views in medallions. Florentine arms on the cup.

CAPODI MONTE,
near Naples.

First period. Established 1736 by Charles III., king of the two Sicilies, and extinct in 1812. Stamped without colour. But this ware, which is generally in high relief and exquisitely modelled,

CAPO DI MONTE rarely has marks. The original establishment was removed to the palace of Buen Retiro in 1759, when Charles III. (on the death of his brother Ferdinand) became king of Spain. He took with him many of the models and twenty-two of the best workmen, and allotted part of his palace to the new factory, where some very fine pieces were produced. Capo di Monte has of late years been extensively forged at Doccia.

NAPLES.

Royal manufacture. Established with the sanction of Ferdinand IV., soon after his accession in 1759, and extinct in 1821. It is in general beautifully painted, rarely, if ever, in relief, therefore quite distinct from Capo di Monte. Soft paste.

Ditto.

On a tea-service richly decorated with views and cameo paintings. Both these marks are used indifferently, blue, red, or stamped without colour.

* * Many of the Italian Manufactories are becoming famous for their forgeries of the valuable kinds of porcelain, such as Majolica, Sèvres, and Dresden.

France.

SAINT CLOUD.

Mark of the first period, when the manufacture was under the patronage of Louis XIV. in 1702.

SAINT CLOUD.

Soft paste, marked in blue under the glaze, or engraved. This mark was used between 1740 and 1753. T indicates Trou, the director. Saint Cloud is the parent of the Sèvres, and indeed of all the French manufactories, porcelain having been made there, though of an inferior quality, as early as 1695. After 1702, when Louis XIV. granted the factory exclusive privileges, it assumed for its mark the sun in full splendour. But till 1718, the quality was indifferent. Brongniart, plate liii. fig. 8.

CHANTILLY.

Under the protection of the Prince de Condé. Conducted by the brothers DUBOIS till 1740, when they went to Vincennes. Soft paste. The secret was brought, by a runaway, from Saint Cloud in 1735. Marked in blue, green, or red under the glaze.

ARRAS.

Established about 1782, under the protection of Mons. de Calonne, and ceased about 1786. Soft paste. Marked in blue, under the glaze.

(Villeroi.)

Under the protection of the Duke de Villeroi. The mark engraved, seldom in colours. This manufactory was established about 1740, and was in full activity in 1773. The paste is soft and fine, and scarcely inferior to Sèvres. There was a fine Ewer of this porcelain at Strawberry Hill.

ETIOLLES,
near Corbeil.

Monnier manufacturer, 1766. Soft paste.

BOURG-LA-REINE. Jacques Julien, manufacturer, 1773.
Soft paste.SCEAUX-PENTHIEVRE. Established 1751, conducted by Glot, in 1773. Soft paste, mark engraved.CLIGNANCOURT. Founded by Deruelle. The mark used before Oct. 1775, when he was appointed manufacturer to Monsieur, the King's brother, afterwards Louis XVIII. I have heard this mark called MOULINES, but I suspect incorrectly.CLIGNANCOURT. Another early mark of Deruelle, used before 1780 on pieces of Chinese pattern. Hard paste, marked in red.CLIGNANCOURT. The official mark used on pieces made during the patronage of Monsieur, 1785—1792, and called "Porcelain de Monsieur." Hard paste, marked in red.

PARIS
(Pont-aux-Choux). Hard paste, painted with landscapes. This factory was established in 1756, under the patronage of Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans. This and the two next monograms were all three found on one service by Mr. D. Falcke, by whom they have been communicated to the editor.

Ditto. Another mark of the same period.

Ditto. Another mark of the same period.

PARIS. Established in the Rue-Fontaine-au-Roi, called "De la Courtille," under the direction of Locré, 1773. Hard paste, mark in blue.

PARIS. Faubourg St. Lazare, 1773. Hard paste. P. A. Hanung manufacturer, who, in 1761, had sold his secret of hard paste manufacture to the Sèvres establishment. His Paris manufacture is rare, as, owing to some difference with the French government, he was not allowed to continue.

PARIS. Faubourg St. Antoine. Morelle manufacturer, in 1773. Hard paste.

PARIS. Faubourg St. Antoine. Souroux manufacturer, in 1773. Hard paste.

PARIS. Gros-Caillou. Advenir-Lamarre, manufacturer, in 1773. Hard paste.

PARIS.

“Porcelaine de la Reine.” Lebeuf manufacturer, 1785 to 1792. Hard paste marked in red, with an A under the French crown, for Marie Antoinette. An A crowned was also used on the Turin porcelain.

PARIS.

Rue de Bondy. Dihl and Guerhard. Hard paste. Mark pencilled in gold or colour.

PARIS,
called
ANGOULEME.

ANGOULEME PORCELAIN, by the same manufacturers, 1785—1792. Stencilled in red on a soft paste cup, dated 1783.

PARIS.

Christopher Potter. Rue de Crussol. Hard paste, called “Prince of Wales’s porcelain.” Stencilled in red, but on richly painted specimens the mark is in gold. On later specimens, B is substituted for the crown, in blue.

BELLEVILLE, near Paris.

Jacob Petit, about 1790, et seq. to the present time. Hard paste. Pencilled in blue, and burnt in. On a pair of curiously formed flower vases, well painted and gilt, like old Worcester.

NIDERVILLER.

Hard paste. Manufacture of François Lanfray, successor to General Custine, about 1790. Stencilled in blue.

ORLEANS.

A label of three points, stamped in blue on both. Under the patronage of the Duke of Orleans, 1753—1770. Hard and soft paste.

ORLEANS.

Hard paste. On a bowl and cover painted in flowers. Marked in blue under the glaze.

Unknown.

Figured by Mr. Marryat.

It would be endless to adduce all the unknown French marks, nor would they be of any value without the means of giving some such description as would tend to identify them.

EXPLANATORY TABLE

OF MARKS AND MONOGRAMS USED BY THE SÈVRES MANUFACTORY, (FIRST ESTABLISHED AT VINCENNES IN 1740, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE FRÈRES DUBOIS, WHO CAME FROM CHANTILLY), COMMENCING WITH THE YEAR 1753, BEING THE FIRST IN WHICH THIS MANUFACTURE WAS MARKED, ACCORDING TO A ROYAL LICENSE GRANTED AUG. 19TH OF THIS YEAR TO ELOI BRICHARD.

FIRST ROYAL EPOCH, 1753—1792.

(For the period previous to 1753, see ST. CLOUD, page 477.)

Double L interlaced in blue always under the glaze. The character of this cypher changes with the period, and becomes gradually less formal. The absence of letters indicative of date is often perplexing, for the omission occurs in pieces of every period. Indeed, some fine pieces of Sèvres have no mark at all. It is supposed that in long services or series it was often considered unnecessary to mark more than a few of the principal pieces. The crown or fleur-de-lis is sometimes placed over the double L, and denotes that the piece was made for royal use; of such, those between 1760 and 1769 are among the finest.

In blue under the glaze. The letter in the centre denotes the year in which the piece was painted, beginning with 1753. (See Table on page 495.) The monogram or mark, placed above or below, is that of the painter or gilder.

The double letters commenced in 1777, and ended in 1793 with R R, as will be seen in the Chronological Tables. They are not always capitals, but often small letters. Bernal's No. 205, is marked a a. When the royal cypher is pencilled in gold, by Vincent or other gilders of a late period, it is sometimes decorative, like that of the period 1814—24. The jewelled cups were manufactured chiefly for Marie Antoinette, sometime between 1770, when she was married, and 1790—probably between 1775 and the latter period.

R.F.

Sèvres.

REPUBLICAN EPOCH, 1792—1804.

These three monograms of the "Republique Française," are always (as a law) accompanied by the word "Sèvres," and were used indiscriminately according to the fancy of the painters, from 1792 to 1800, often without a date. The custom of marking pieces with indications of their date, ceased as a practice after 1793, and was not resumed until 1801. Many of these Republican pieces are gilt by Vincent, and have his mark of 2000 in gold figures. (See Chronological Tables.)

Sèvres.

The Republican monogram R. F. was disused about the end of 1799, or the beginning of 1800, and from that time, to the end of 1802, the mark consisted merely of the word "Sèvres."

This mark, which indicates the Consular period, was first used in the year 1803, and is generally stencilled in red. The mark underneath denotes the year in which the piece was painted. The present indicates 1804. (See Chronological Table, page 495.)

IMPERIAL EPOCH, 1804—1814.

A mark used from 1804 to 1809, generally stamped or stencilled in red, like the preceding.

The Imperial eagle stamped in red, was substituted for the above mark in 1810, and continued until the abdication in 1814. During this period the date was generally pencilled by the artist as well as his monogram.

SECOND ROYAL EPOCH. LOUIS XVIII., 1814—1824.

Revival of the Royal cipher, or double L, usually printed in blue; the year is indicated by the figures placed below the word Sèvres. Thus the present means 1821. Used from May 1814 to September, 1824.

REIGN OF CHARLES X., 1824—1830.

Variations of three similar ciphers, a double C, used from 1824 to 1828, and printed in blue. The figures indicate the year: the present are 1824, 1825, 1827.

Marks of the years 1829 and 1830. They were intended to prevent counterfeits in the matter of decoration; the first, that of a simple C, was applied to porcelain merely gilt-edged; the second to figured pieces, whatever might be their richness.

REIGN OF LOUIS PHILIPPE, 1830—1848.

Used from the beginning of August, 1830, until the end of the same year.

Used from the beginning of 1831 till Nov. 1834.

L. P., the king's initials, substituted for the preceding in November, 1834, and continued till July 1845, after which the double reversed monogram L. P. was used till Feb. 26, 1848, when Napoleon III. became President.

The Chateau d'Eau services, white and gold, have the above mark, dated 1837, and, in addition, the mark as in margin.

The mark on porcelain not ornamented is in chrome green, burnt in and glazed. Every plain white piece made between 1834 and 1848 should bear this mark. The mark on gilt porcelain continued to be that given above:—blue for pieces with simple gold lines, and gold for those decorated.

S.48.

Between 1848 and 1851 the decorated pieces were marked S. 48, within a frame, as in margin. The other mark, R(epublique) F(rançaise) S(èvres), 1851, is what was adopted on the fine soft paste Vases sent by the Sèvres manufactory to our Crystal Palace Exhibition of 1851. A pair of these, 10½ inches high, was lately sold by auction, for thirty guineas; and another pair, larger, for nearly forty guineas.

Mark after the proclamation of the Empire, in 1852, when the eagle was resumed.

Monogram of the Emperor, 1854. The mark now in use.

MANUFACTORY OF SÈVRES FROM 1753 TO 1800.

* The appearance of the extraordinary comet of 1769, suggested to the administration of the time, the idea of transmitting the remembrance of it by their productions; it was thus that a great vase was made in the form of a sphere, with the appendages in bronze, representing the long luminous tail of the comet, and some painters substituted for the ordinary mark, which in this year was the letter R, the following figure:

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

OF THE MARKS USED IN THE ROYAL MANUFACTURE AT SÈVRES,

Showing the period of the manufacture of WHITE PIECES, from the year IX (1801), when the practice commenced.

The following marks, which are composed of signs and figures, are engraved, and indicate both the year and the month. Thus, the number X following the marks "q. z." (1814) would mean October, which is the 10th month, and the unit I following the number 19 (1819), would mean January, which is the first month. The monograms which accompany them are the marks of the workmen.

Year IX (1801) —	T	9	Year 1808 —	8	Year 1815 —	q. n.

* After this period the two last figures of the date continued to be used as the distinctive mark of the year. The mark with the device of the king, which closes this table, was first used in July, 1845, without reference to the marks stamped in paste; it is stamped in chrome green under the glaze.

Oriental.

CHINA.

Mandarin. Hard Porcelain. This stamp, sometimes red, sometimes blue, is said to denote imperial manufacture.

JAPAN.

On a fine old bowl, in the form of a gourd, richly coloured and embossed.

Messrs. Brongniart and Riocreux give only these two marks. Mr. Marryat, in his first edition, added some half-dozen, communicated by Dr. Klemm, of Dresden, but in his second edition has withdrawn them, as incorrect. In a new and very elaborate French work on the Porcelain of China and Japan, translated from original authorities, by M. Stanislaus Julien and Dr. J. Hoffman, we get a vast amount of marks and information, but little, if anything, of practical value. Of the many fine pieces of Chinese Porcelain brought to this country by Mr. Fortune, not one of those which happened to be marked could be identified with anything figured in Julien; and the rarest and best were not marked at all. Under these circumstances, and for want of space, the reader must be content with a few indications, which will be best given by citing from Messrs. Christie and Manson's recent Catalogues, their descriptions of such articles as have sold for the highest prices.

It will be seen that CRACKLES of all kinds are highly appreciated, and among these the TURQUOISE, CRIMSON, and SEA-GREEN, take the lead. Of COLOURS not crackled, and which to an uninitiated eye are certainly the handsomest, the most esteemed are TURQUOISE, DEEP BLUE, YELLOW, CRIMSON, RUBY, GREEN, light and dark, MOTTLED—generally Blue and Purple, or Crimson and Purple,—PINK, and CREAM-COLOUR.

The following extracts must tell the rest.
